

Directly Sell Estate And Properties With Real Estate Consultant In Houston Tx

December 31, 2018

December 31, 2018 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Houston, Texas based Nelson Brothers Homebuyers has recently issued a public advisory that they now offer direct "We Buy Houses" service to homeowners around Houston and the surrounding areas.

"We are pleased to announce that we are now offering a simplified approach to property owners for selling their homes, so they will no longer have to deal with difficult and unreachable real estate agents. Our solutions primarily aims to directly purchase homes directly sellers to simply negotiations and the transactions overall," says Lilian Knox of Nelson Brothers Homebuyers.

Most often, estates in Houston who are located in specific areas such as <https://goo.gl/maps/CVi1ZBJu58n> are having a hard time finding buyers because of their specific situation. In fact, most owner occupants won't consider buying a house from an estate if the sale needs to be as is.

According to research, Houston is even more ethnically and racially diverse when compared to some of America's largest metropolitan areas like New York and Los Angeles. It houses major industries such as oil and gas, medicine, aerospace and aviation and is home to some of the major and top-rated colleges and universities such as University of Houston, Texas Southern University and South Texas College of Law to name a few.

Moreover, one of the city's best asset is its access to high quality health care. Headquartered in Houston, the internationally renowned Texas Medical Center (TMC) is considered as the largest life sciences destination in the world and offers numerous world-class medical facilities and learning institutions as well.

The cost of living in Houston is also significantly lower when compared to most cities in the US. According to houston.org, the city has the fifth lowest overall cost of living among the nation's 20 most populous metropolitan areas. Overall after-taxes living costs in the area are also 23 percent below the average for the 20 largest urban areas in the country, largely due to affordable housing costs.

In addition, residents also get to experience blue skies almost all year round and enjoy ten of the largest urban public parks in the US. It also has more than 300 miles of interconnected network of on-street and off-road paths for bikers and hikers alike.

The company is located in the city and offer valuable expertise in Houston's real estate market. They also offer "a direct service" to eliminate middlemen and help clients to significantly save on real estate agent fees and commissions.

One resident on niche.com said, "Houston is so full of opportunities for all fields. The living expenses are affordable, they offer 24-hour daycare services and there are tons of companies that offers tuition reimbursement. Also, it is such a sight to see especially at night. The city lights up and it is absolutely beautiful."

"Houston is a very welcoming homey place. The weather is always very warm and humid so if you are looking for summer almost all year round, this is the place for you. The houses are very spacious and much cheaper than other states. For instance, a studio in New York is around the same price for a three-bedroom apartment in Houston. The area is very lively and peaceful so it is family friendly," says another resident.

Another resident who was born and raised in Houston said, "I wouldn't leave my city to go live somewhere else. The diversity in Houston is amazing. The variety of cultures and different activities that you're able to do here are incredible. Houston should be on your bucket list of places to visit."
