December 31, 2018 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Houston, Texas-based Direct Homebuyers is pleased to announce that they are now offering direct, efficient and hassle-free "We Buy Houses" service to homeowners who are looking to sell their properties immediately.

"We are pleased to announce that our company has already started buying houses and properties directly. We provide homeowners from Houston and the surrounding areas a better alternative to traditional estate agents for them to save money from costly agent service and commission fees. Further, we market their estate to our comprehensive client database and ensure a fast property selling turnaround," says Katherine Reid of Direct Homebuyers.

Houston is a progressive city in the state of Texas. It has an approximate population of 2.2 million and is considered as one of the best places to live in Harris County. Residents are enjoying a suburban feel while most people rent their homes. In Houston, the demographics are composed of families and young professionals who tend to lean liberal. Most public schools in the area are highly rated as well. Some of the most notable universities in the area are the likes of Texas A&M, The University of Houston and Texas Tech University. Those who are considering to relocate in Houston may click <https://goo.gl/maps/CkexbG5fXvx> to know more of the nearby establishments, schools and other facilities.

According to niche.com, an online platform that ranks cities based on its overall livability, Houston achieved a consensus rating of 'A' in terms on public schools, housing, crime and safety, nightlife, diversity and generally for being a good place to raise a family. It also achieved a national ranking of 44th in the best cities to buy a house in America.

Independent studies revealed that living in Houston is more affordable than most other large cities in the United States. Research shows that house prices are less expensive than nearby cities like Austin and Chicago while energy costs are significantly competitive due to fewer regulations. It is also worth noting that there is no state income tax which translates to bigger take-home pay. A lot of job opportunities also await Houston residents as it houses big corporations in the energy, aerospace, aviation, distribution, manufacturing as well as life sciences industries. The growing economy also adds to Houston's overall positive atmosphere and most people no longer have to worry about their job security and stability.

Many current residents regard Houston as a very good place for raising a family. Aside from excellent housing, employment opportunities and quality education, people also enjoy the diversity of the city and all of its perks as well. 'I like that Houston has so much diversity. It's like being able to travel and experience so many cultures without having to buy a plane ticket. My favorite thing about Houston has got to be the rodeo. It only happens once a year and the entire city attends. It's great because you get to see rodeo competitions, live performances, go to the carnival and eat sinfully delicious food all in one place. Overall, I love living here. There's always something fun to do and someone new to meet,' says one of its current residents.

Another Houston native on niche.com said, 'Houston is one of the most diverse places in the country. Cost of living is very cheap. Downtown is booming with plenty of amazing eats and urban sights. The city is a melting pot of various cultures and ethnicities that is very evident in the artworks of Houston. Museum district is stunning, especially the art museum. Most importantly, Houston is very good for families.'
