December 26, 2018 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Dr. Umbareen Mahmood, a Board Certified and double Ivy League trained New York based Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeon, is pleased to announce that she is opening her new practice. She employs both surgical and non-surgical techniques tailored to the individual patient and is excited about providing her services to patients in her own practice.

When contacted about her decision to start her own practice, Dr. Mahmood said, "Well, it's been a long time coming. Back in September, I decided it was time to move on from the practice where I had been helping patients by performing various surgeries. Over the following weeks, when I was exploring all options, I realized that a lot of things didn't seem like the right fit for me. I have a clear image on how I want to practice medicine and take care of patients, so I realized the best way to do this was to start my own practice."

In her new practice, she offers a wide variety of treatments and procedures. Everything from abdominoplasty (more commonly known as a "tummy tuck") and liposuction, breast surgeries including breast reduction, breast lift, and breast augmentation, to treatments for gynecomastia. In addition, she also provides nonsurgical procedures including Botox and dermal fillers, along with services targeting skin issues, such as scars and various lesions. View her Facebook page for more details about her practice and to contact her with additional questions.

On the topic of the services she provides, Dr. Mahmood said, "As a plastic surgeon, I operate from head-to-toe. I perform both cosmetic and reconstructive surgery. I've performed a lot of cosmetic breast and body surgeries such as breast augmentations, breast lifts, tummy tucks, and liposuction. But I've also performed a lot of reconstructive procedures. During my time in the plastic surgery field, I've seen a lot of women who were born with breast abnormalities, women with significant breast asymmetry, patients unhappy with their initial reconstruction and want a revision, among many other things. Other examples of reconstruction include patients who've had treatment for skin cancer and desire advanced reconstruction by a plastic surgeon, often when it's on the face or other cosmetically sensitive areas. Nearly every form of plastic and reconstructive surgery is within reach and it's a privilege for me to be able to provide that for my patients."

Amia Carter, a former client of Dr. Mahmood, said, "From the first consultation to the surgery date, Dr. Mahmood was great to work with. She explained everything very clearly and answered every question I had. I heartily recommend her to anyone considering surgery. I had a breast augmentation, liposuction, and Botox and had great results across the board, while still looking natural. If you are considering plastic surgery, contact Dr. Umbareen Mahmood."

A review of Dr. Mahmood's services left on her website reads, "I've been thinking about breast augmentation for the last 4-5 years after I had my son. I constantly postponed it as I wasn't sure about the complications, recovery time and to be honest I simply did not know who to go to. When I found Dr. Mahmood I had no doubts that I was doing this. She made me feel confident in the procedure and the recovery time, I had no doubts that all would be well. The second thing that impressed me besides her confidence and knowledge was her age. She is young, intelligent, detailed oriented and beyond professional. My results are excellent..."

Dr. Mahmood has a lot of experience, not just in her field, but also in the medical industry as a whole. She has undergone extensive training in plastic and reconstructive surgery at the University of South Florida. In addition, she has also worked at several prestigious institutions such as the Moffitt Cancer Center in Tampa, FL, All Children's Hospital in St. Petersburg, FL, and was actively involved in the medical care of veterans at two large Veterans' hospitals. Furthermore, she has also written and published several medical articles relating to the field of plastic surgery.

In addition to her Facebook page, Dr. Mahmood's website, <http://drumahmood.com>, has even more detailed information about all the services she provides, along with other testimonials from her clients. Schedule your
