The company?s air conditioning repair service is provided by highly trained technicians and they are available 24/7 to ensure that any kind of emergency at any time of the day or night can be responded to promptly. Currently, the company is offering geothermal heat pumps for those who want to go green. This is because geothermal heat pumps offer the most efficient way for heating or cooling. In fact, it has been noted that these heat pumps offer savings of up to 70 percent compared to the conventional systems. And in addition to the geothermal heat pumps, the company also provides variable frequency drives (VFDs), which are able to increase efficiency further.

Another essential service offered by D & M Service Company is air duct cleaning. This is critical because not only does it offer savings in energy costs but it also offers better health for those living in the home. This is because air duct cleaning gets rid of the dust particles that are cycling within the house, causing dust to settle down on furniture and people breathing in dirty air. During those seasons when the air is filled with dust, pollen and other potential allergens, air duct cleaning ensures that people living in the house are able to avoid allergy attacks and are healthier. The company suggests that homeowners and building owners should have their air ducts cleaned at least once a year to ensure that there are no dust and allergens in the air.

And, of course, for heating systems, furnace repair is an important service offered by D & M Service Company. The heating system becomes more and more important as the nights get colder and colder. It is, therefore, advisable to have a furniture expert inspect the home or building?s furnace to ensure that safe, clean air will be circulating throughout the house. Furthermore, it would be a good idea to calibrate the heating system of the house to achieve the most efficient performance. Particularly for the older furnaces, regular maintenance is vital to ensure that the system will work properly. And to ensure that houses and buildings are never without a heating system that is running properly, the company also offers emergency furnace repair 24/7. The skilled heating technicians are available 24/7 to respond to any problem involving the furnace.

At D & M Service Company, they offer all kinds of services with regards to HVAC systems including air conditioning repair, air conditioning installation, air duct cleaning, furnace repair, heat pumps installation or repair, installation or repair of electric units and wall furnaces, air duct design and evaluation, air balancing air duct system replacement and renovation, air duct repair and sealing indoor air quality testing and installation, installation of ultraviolet light systems, electronic air filtration system installation, humidity control air conditioner systems, custom air purification systems, design of air duct systems and Energy Star air conditioner replacement, carbon monoxide testing programmable thermostat installation, and repair of motors and compressors.
