July 06, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

STS Travel of Glen Burnie, MD has just released a new company policy focused toward educating college students via comprehensive guidelines and travel advisories. The demand for education has risen following various recent incidents involving Spring Breakers at Panama City Beach in Florida. By observing these guidelines, STS hopes students will be able to maximize their vacation fun while staying out of harm's way.

The primary cause of most of these incidents is a rise in alcohol induced anti-social behavior, resulting in the Panama City Beach council placing restrictions on alcohol consumption on the beach during the month of March. While most Spring Breakers enjoy their drinks responsibly, several students have caused damage to public and private property, in addition to reportedly attacking residents, as seen during Warrior Beach Retreat, an event for wounded military veterans.

In addition to alcohol related incidents, STS has cautioned students to stay on the safe side if offered an invitation to a stranger's house party. Preventive measures like these would keep students away from possible danger that might erupt in the confines of a stranger's property, especially with rising gun related incidents at spring break resorts.

It isn't uncommon for vacationers to throw caution to the wind and become careless about their personal safety, getting them in trouble and disrupting their stay. STS Travel encourages revelers to enjoy, indulge and explore while maintaining a level of personal awareness. This includes learning about the locality, especially when in foreign countries, staying aware of nearest emergency facilities and respecting local laws. STS Travel has insisted that by considering their advice, party-goers should be able to enjoy an unhindered vacation.

STS Travel provides recommendations on the best Spring Break vacation packages based on customer feedback. Recently, Cancun in Mexico has been rated a highly favorable resort for college students. Taking note of the rise in popularity, STS Travel has organized Cancun Spring Break packages that can be booked through their website.

In an effort to connect directly with students, STS Travel has ensured their availability through e-mail, a toll-free phone service and their Student Travel Services Facebook page.
