Top Fuel Guitar of Illinois has sought to bring convenience to its customers by announcing the launch of their Guitar Pick Punch on the Amazon marketplace. The heavy-duty punch can create guitar picks from a variety of materials with relative ease. Savings can be enjoyed because there is no need to purchase ready-made guitar picks as this product would allow users to punch picks from expired bank cards, gift cards, plastic food containers and many other similar materials.

As a bonus for its customers, Top Fuel Guitar is including a free instructional guide; Top 10 Ways to Maximize Your Picking, which provides tips to improve the user's key elements of guitar picking.

Robert Lee Molton, owner of Top Fuel Guitar, is an indie recording artist and a rock guitar coach. He has used his online company to educate music artists with his guitar instructional products. The Guitar Pick Punch is designed to cut out industry standard 351 guitar picks. Touting simplicity to operate even for amateurs, it requires a thin material to slide in and the handle pressed down firmly. The precise and solid construction of the device ensures a clean and well-defined cut, with the perfectly formed pick dropping out of a bottom slot. Top Fuel Guitar recommends experimenting with different materials to draw multiple dynamic tones from the guitar sound.

Apart from using them with guitars, trendy DIY jewelry made with picks has seen a rise. By cutting out picks from colored materials of various types and textures, they are made into creative "Pick Art" jewelry. Artistic customers of the Pick Punch have reported their satisfaction of the versatility it has provided them in making necklaces, bracelets and key chains.

To alleviate any quality concerns, Top Fuel Guitar has further announced a 100% money-back guarantee for its customers based on product satisfaction. The punch is sold exclusively on Amazon and users can click here to start the ordering process and learning more about it. Since the launch, The Guitar Pick Press has received an impressive response from its customers and has placed itself as one of the best guitar pick punches available.
