Milton, Fla.-- Butler's Auto Recycling, a Milton auto parts shop, recycled 50,000 vehicles in November. The auto parts store collected these vehicles through their different collection services.

"It all begins with someone having a bad day, but that bad day, in turn, saves average Joes millions of dollars because of businesses like Butler Auto Recycling," says Dawn Butler, a real estate reporter.

Butler's collects cars either for cash or by charitable donation. Drivers can call up Butler's Auto Recycling and receive a cash offer for their vehicles. Butler's will receive any vehicle, functioning or not. They will also pick up the vehicle at any scheduled time that works for the driver. Butler's does not charge for hidden towing or storage fees, and they promise the offered cash price over the phone every time.

Drivers may also donate their vehicles to a charity of their choice through Butler's Auto Recycling. Butler's handles the necessary forms for the donation, making it simple for drivers. Drivers also receive a tax donation receipt.

All vehicles at Butler's Auto Recycling are 95% recycled the environmentally friendly way. If the vehicle itself cannot be reused, about 70% of it is reused for parts, 25% is recycled, and only 5% is thrown out.

This [recycling] is merely the next step in the never-ending cycle of reuse of metals off of automobiles whether it be for a washing machine or a dryer, maybe structural steel for a new house, or even a whole new car, CEO Jim Butler says.

The Milton Salvage Yard has no doubt made an environmental influence by recycling 50,000 vehicles in November. They have given consultations to many Milton residents on what to do with their vehicles, and they have disposed of and recycled the appropriate auto parts.
