January 09, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Brent Silver Construction, a general contractor based in Los Angeles, CA, has announced that they are offering unique man cave construction ideas for homeowners in the greater Los Angeles area. With a man cave, men would have a personal place in the home where they can go to when they want to relax or have a silent moment for themselves. Brent Silver Construction, one of the general contractors Los Angeles homeowners can depend on, with its experience and knowledge, has compiled many ideas for the man cave, which homeowners can use.

Arie Abekasis, spokesperson for Brent Silver Construction, says, "We have a long list of available man cave ideas that we can share to homeowners who want to have that special place in the home. For any home remodeling ideas, people in Los Angeles can contact us if they need to consult with us. Our business hours are from 9:00 am to 6:00 pm, from Monday to Saturday."

Being custom remodeling specialists in Los Angeles, Brent Silver Construction offers services for converting the garage into a living space. For whatever reason, if the garage is no longer being used, this can be converted into a room like a man cave that can be used as living space. Being man cave builders, the general contractor wants homeowners in Los Angeles to know that they have several ideas they can tap into.

The Brent Silver Construction spokesperson wants to point out that when transforming a garage into a man cave, there are several things to consider, from how to bring in light, to how well the new room will blend with the current home. For instance, it is advisable to ensure that the materials to be used for the cladding and roof match with those on the main house, matching the door style and window. Meanwhile, there are many ways by which natural light can be introduced into a man cave resulting from a garage conversion. One way is to use the wall that was previously used as the garage door to install windows. And if the garage is located at the back of the home or has a private outlook, it would be possible to install sliding, French or bifold doors into one wall.

Meanwhile, aside from constructing a man cave, Brent Silver Construction also offers other remodeling and construction services, such as custom kitchen and bathrooms, home renovations, and even custom pools. The spokesperson points out that trends involving residential home construction have been evolving rapidly and much of the changes have to do with lifestyle preferences and are focused on functionality and comfort.

However, the main point of constructing a new home is that it should be personal and therefore should not be restricted by modern trends. Nevertheless, it also helps to pay attention to the current trend, which is that homeowners no longer want the huge, estate-like homes of the recent past. People want smaller rooms with less storage space, bigger windows to allow natural light into the home, and open floor plans that permit the outside to be integrated into their daily living.

In addition, modern homeowners now want more glass and lift-and-slide doors, which are designed to open and disappear and allowing the home to join the outdoors. Modern homeowners also want to make sure that all spaces in the home are usable. And lastly, people now tend to use advances in electronics technology to personalize the home, provide more comfort, and enhance security. All of these need to be considered in a home construction or remodeling project.
