Hydreight Cleveland recently discussed the benefits of IV therapy and how it can help clients of all ages. The Las Vegas, Nevada based company states that IV therapy is a revolutionary service that helps consumers to stay hydrated and healthy.

Shane Madden, a spokesperson for the company says, "Hydration is important, particularly for those who are going to be on the go and not really take time to ensure that they are getting enough water and electrolytes. Our mobile IV service provides a solution. Customers simply have to click on an app on their mobile phones and a medical professional will come to them to administer IV therapy."

Madden states that the procedure is safe and effective, and says that it works nicely for consumers. Customers simply download an app for the company and then fill out a quick questionnaire about their general health. All of the setting up and appointment scheduling is done through the app. Madden says that IV therapy offers a wide range of benefits, not the least of which is hydration.

"People don't always understand how simple it is to dehydrate," Madden says. "Someone could lose a lot of hydration simply by working out or by a night of drinking. IV therapy helps to keep that person from becoming so dehydrated that they have to go into a hospital for treatment. In addition, IV therapy allows for better absorption of vitamins and minerals, which also offers many benefits.?

Madden says that the benefits of this type of therapy can be enjoyed in a number of ways. The company currently has a team of medical professionals that can administer IV hydration fluids to a client in their home, in their office, in a hotel room or other areas. The company states that they only hire medical professionals, trained and licensed paramedics and nurses, to provide their IV therapy. Madden states that those who schedule an appointment can expect to begin feeling the benefits of their IV therapy in about 10 minutes from the booking time.

IV therapy is being used currently to treat a number of diseases and disorders. Madden states that IV has been around for decades and used to treat people with a wide range of medical conditions. When solutions are administered to the patient directly into the bloodstream, as opposed to taking them orally or by other means, they tend to work faster. IV therapy is simply administering a solution through the veins. The benefits include flushing out toxins from the body, increased energy, a serious boost in immunity and Madden states that the IV therapy that they offer also helps to correct fluid and electrolyte balances which could cause dehydration.

Madden states taking control of your health is vital. He states that they offer a wide range of products that are designed to help hydrate, cure a hangover to even a more comprehensive solution that offers anti-aging benefits. Madden states that the Hydreight website gives more information about the various types of therapies that are offered, and the app allows clients to choose the specific type of IV therapy that they want. Madden states that the therapies that they offer can benefit everyone from college athletes who need an energy boost to corporate professionals who feel overworked and fatigued.

Madden states that those who are unsure of whether or not they can tolerate IV therapy, those who may have serious health issues going on and be under a doctor's care, should consult with their physician prior to scheduling their booking. He states that the company makes it easy for customers to schedule their IV therapy by simply opening the app and setting up the appointment. Payment is also easy and can be done on the app. Madden says that anyone who has questions about the benefits of their IV therapy or the process can contact the company directly to learn more or visit them on their official company website.
