January 16, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Herman ProAV, based in Miramar, Florida, has released a new HDMI cable onto the Amazon marketplace. The cable is an A Male to A Male type that supports ultra-high definition video and is ready for 3D video. The company states that those who are interested in the cable can read more about its features, as well as reviews from other customers who have purchased it, by visiting them on Amazon.

David Wolf, a representative for the company says, "This affordable cable supports 48-bit deep color and wide-angle theatrical video. It is a must for those who really treasure their electronics and the features that they provide."

Wolf states that the cable provides quality audio return with simultaneous delivery of multiple streaming audio to several different users. It features Dolby True HD audio. The cable has cable connectors that are plated in 24k gold, a feature that Wolf says adds to its quality.

"The overall design, right down to the gold plating of the A Male to A Male connectors ensures that users will not lose quality when they are transferring video and audio from a number of electronics," Wolf Says. "It supports Blu-Ray players, Apple TV, Fire TV, Xbox, PlayStation, and a number of other HDMI enabled devices and connects them seamlessly to televisions that support HDMI connection."

The newly released HDMI cord can now be purchased directly through the Amazon marketplace. Wolf says that it offers fast connection ethernet qualities and says that overall, it solves a number of issues that many electronics lovers face when connecting audio and video equipment to their televisions. He says that the new cord can support up to 18 Gbps in high speed transfers and provides users with the best gaming and movie experience possible.

Herman ProAV offers a wide range of electronic enabled devices and accessories, all of which can be viewed on their official company website or through the Amazon marketplace. The company began in 1963 with a single store in Miami, Florida. Since its first day, it has grown to become one of the largest distributors in the nation offering factory-authorized original replacement parts for electronics.

The company today is one of the leading distributors in the United States for cable, connectivity and infrastructure audio visual products. Over the past nearly five decades, they have grown to include a wide range of products in a number of categories. Wolf states that throughout all of their years in service, they have always maintained their high quality of products and continue to strive to improve the operational efficiency of electronics for consumers. The company states that their philosophy is to utilize a proactive distribution model in order to create trusting partnerships with their customers around the world. They do this by reducing the costs that are typically associated with their line of products.

Although they started in Miami, the company's corporate offices today are located in Miramar and they now have three additional distribution facilities throughout the country, located in Nevada, New Jersey and Atlanta, Georgia.

Herman ProAV offers a wide range of products that are used in inventory management, logistics management, project staging, procurement, logistical and other industries. The company states that it has, over the years, and will continue to form partnerships with suppliers that ultimately benefit their customers. Their line of products today includes wireless microphone systems, connectors and a variety of cables, including their new 4k HDMI cable. Wolf states that their latest product can be viewed and purchased through the Amazon marketplace and says that they offer a number of additional products on the marketplace, as well.

Customers who are interested in learning more about the company's new cable or any of their available products can visit them on their official Amazon seller's page for a complete list of products available on the marketplace. Alternatively, a complete list of their products, as well as the company's history and other information can be viewed on their website.
