

Burbank Learning Facility Announces They Offer Classes for Contractors License in Los Angeles

January 16, 2019

BURBANK, CA - January 16, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Many people who have taken the test for the California State Contractors License will tell others that they had much difficulty passing it the first few times they took the exam. That's why a local learning facility has decided to help by providing their students with the means to pass the California State Contractors exam much more easily.

The name of the company that's providing help to their contractor licensing students is called Contractors State License Center. They describe themselves as a company that has been helping prospective contractors have an easier time getting their licenses since 1974. Their classes for contractors license in Los Angeles are very flexible in their design too.

Their course is designed to help with both parts of the difficult California State Contractors exam. The exam itself consists of one section that deals with Law and Business and a second section that deals with the exact contractor specialty that a person is applying for. The company believes that the wide scope of material covered in the exam is the very reason that anyone who wants to take the California State Contractors exam needs their learning services.

Company spokesperson Eric Jacobs explains how their course can help those that want a California State Contractors License; he says, "Not to say it can't be done, but statistics show that very few people are able to pass the California State Contractors Test without a little extra external help. We are here to help those that really want a state contractor's license to realize that goal. Over the years we have developed a series of study guides that cover a large majority of the material that is often seen on the California State Contractors Exam. That type of focused test preparation is usually the exact form of external help that will get our clients a passing grade."

Their California State Contractors exam preparatory course is done over a six week period. During that time their students will attend a 2-hour classroom session each week throughout the six weeks that the course is taught. The lectures can also be reviewed online if their students should want to do that and they have other resources available online too. These include such learning tools for their students as study guides, practice tests and more.

This contractors license school in Los Angeles is done in a regular classroom setting for the most part. Eric says the reason for this is that there is just something special about oneself being able to prepare for the state contractors test in a classroom environment; he adds, "Our research shows that contractors have a higher passing rate when studying in a classroom setting. In order to help someone pass this exam, we have designed and implemented a very effective course of study that has been proven to work over the years. We consider ourselves to be a very comprehensive California contractor's school. Our curriculum is specifically designed to help those who take our contractors course pass it the very first time. The program we offer works because it's a course that has been modified and improved constantly over the 25 years that we have been teaching it."

Their Contractors State License Center classrooms are located at 3014 West Burbank Blvd #C in Burbank, California. They are adjacent to the Church of Christ religious facility in Burbank and across the street from a company known as the Safety Shop. The listed business hours for their company are 9 am - 6 pm Monday through Friday.

Eric himself can be reached at (800) 562-0008 or an interested party can send him an email at info@cslcschool.com. They welcome those that are interested in becoming a California state licensed contractor to come to see them for a free consultation.

More detailed information on the learning services they offer can also be seen on their website. This includes such information as the courses they offer, more details on what is on the California State Contractors exam and who needs a contractor's license. They are also an approved post-secondary learning facility.
