

San Antonio Continues to Be a Seller's Market, Says Dependable Homebuyers

January 15, 2019

January 15, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

With home sales up over the past 5 years, San Antonio's real estate market is proving it is significantly stronger than this time last year. In fact, there are less homes for sale today than during the same time period a year ago. Many experts believe that this is due to homes going off market quicker than a year ago.

Recent studies indicate that real estate for sale in San Antonio has been on the rise. The areas which have witnessed the most increase in property sales are the city center and suburban neighborhoods in a good school district. The growth of real estate investors is part of the driving force behind the city's growth.

Real estate investors and homeowners who are interested in performing research on San Antonio's real estate market are encouraged to visit Dependable Homebuyers' new room.
