Dr. Ramiro Morales, a leading provider of cosmetic surgery in Miami, Florida, credits the addition of his advanced eyelid procedure for the increase in clients seeking plastic surgery. The procedure, popular with men and women, is a favorite with among clients ranging from middle age to elderly clients.

Plastic surgery includes a variety of procedures from breast enhancement, liposuction, abdominoplasty, face lift, eyelid procedures, botox, and fillers. Each of these procedures represent varying levels of surgical or non-surgical intervention, providing temporary and permanent results.

Breast enhancements are a set of surgical procedures which can augment (increase) or reduce breast size. Individuals have a variety of reasons for wanting to alter breast size including improvement of posture or to obtain a more attractive appearance. Surgeons can also combine breast lifts with either augmentation or reduction to provide a realistic and attractive result.

Liposuction is the surgical removal of fat from a specific area of the body. A specialized tool with suction is used to break up and remove fat deposits from target areas, smoothing and contouring the body and reducing the size of the target area.

Abdominoplasty is the reduction of excess skin from the abdominal area. Removal of the abdominal skin gives the abdomen a flatter and more toned appearance. The procedure is popular with those who have loose skin resulting from childbirth or weight loss.

A face lift is a surgical procedure which tightens the skin of the face and neck through a series of incisions and stretching of the skin. Face lifts remove moderate lines and wrinkles in facial skin, giving recipients a younger appearance.

Eyelid procedures remove excess or sagging skin to open and smooth the area around the eyes. The procedure gives a more open appearance to the eye and can remove both fine and moderate wrinkles. Eyelid procedures give patients dramatic results using a less invasive procedure than many surgical interventions. These types of procedures are reportedly becoming the most popular cosmetic surgery in Miami, Florida.

Clients who prefer non-surgical and temporary interventions may choose botox or fillers. Botox, an injection which paralyzes muscles to reduce fine to moderate lines and wrinkles, is easily administered in a clinic setting. It has the added benefit of preventing fine lines and wrinkles from forming if administered before they become established. Fillers, also administered by injection, plump lips or other areas, typically on the face, to add thickness and contour or to reduce moderate lines and wrinkles. Clients needing mild to moderate treatment for lines and wrinkles and those unwilling to undergo surgery can improve their appearance in a short visit with a doctor. Botox and fillers are temporary and need to be readministered periodically to maintain the desired appearance.

In his Miami, Florida Cosmetic Surgery practice, Dr. Morales, is known as The Plastic Surgeon Miami. Like his counterparts, he offers all of the procedures outlined above. He reported the industry has seen an increase in individuals seeking plastic surgery, specifically those seeking eyelid procedures. He stated he is cannot say for certain what has driven this increase in clientele, but he credits improved procedures which offer dramatic results with relatively little intervention, like that offered by eyelid procedures.

Dr. Morales said, "People have become more comfortable with cosmetic surgical procedures. I think that is a big reason for the increase in patients we are seeing. There is less stigma associated with having work done to improve one's physical appearance. Modern procedural advancements have made cosmetic surgery safe, affordable, and more attainable than ever before. It isn't just for celebrities and rich people any longer. We want to offer everyone the opportunity to be the best version of themselves."
