January 23, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Banning Home Protection Pros has announced that they are expanding their home security services in Banning, California and neighboring areas. The company provides a home security review to determine whether there are any security challenges arising from the client's home and lifestyle. They offer customized solutions for homes in Banning to meet their security challenges. More information can be gleaned from their website and the web page <https://www.pressadvantage.com/organization/banning-home-protection-pros>.

A Banning Home Protection Pros spokesperson says, "We are pleased to announce that we are expanding our home security services for properties in Banning, California and nearby areas. We believe that home security continues to be the most important part of every household. Think of it this way: you've invested in that piece of land, spent plenty of hard-earned money for home construction, and build up furnishings for years. It's only expected that you would want to take care of your investment."

Fortunately, while home security systems in the past have been quite expensive, today's advanced home security systems are more affordable while allowing homeowners to keep an eye on their house, loves ones and pets even when they are not home. People can now have cameras installed in their homes and actually see what is happening in their home even while they are at work. The babysitter cameras have now evolved into more advanced home security systems that can easily blend in modern homes so that they are hardly noticeable.

Meanwhile, offices can also use an advanced home security system to check on their employees. In homes, strategically located video cameras can allow parents to check on what the babysitter or their child is doing while they are away. The spokesperson points out that the traditional ways of keeping a home secure continue to be important. People should have locks on their doors and windows, install outdoor lighting and have their shrubs trimmed to easily see if there are any intruders. All of these can contribute in discouraging robbers. It is also a good idea to place important belongings as far away from windows and doors as much as possible.

Meanwhile, home security systems can now be customized to fit the specific needs of a particular family. For instance, a household with an Alzheimer's patient can have motion sensors installed so that alerts are sent to certain family members when someone passes through certain areas, such as doorways.

Furthermore, owning a pet is no longer a problem in having a home security system because today's security systems are capable of differentiating pet activity from other movements.

The spokesperson also wants to emphasize the importance of protecting the home from break-ins as statistics have shown that a break-in occurs every eight to 15 seconds in the US, costing homeowners an average of $1,700. Home security professionals will consider house style, location, and budget when specifying home safety and security systems. Basic systems are home alarm systems but an analysis by experts can result in a recommendation of about 10 cameras, two alarms, and the installation of motion sensors in various parts of the property. Usually, sensors are installed on doors and windows to provide an alarm when these are opened. Putting bars for doors and windows may also help in reducing the possibility of theft. Banning Home Protection Pros can also subcontract the installation of home safety and security systems like ADT or Verge.

Banning Home Protection Pros offers home security services to homes in the Riverside County, California area. They provide advice to homeowners on finding the best home security system that is appropriate for their budget and requirements. They also provide adjustable pan/tilt video monitoring, wireless motion sensors, tamper-resistant security systems, night vision technology, home monitoring system, wireless home security app, and free estimates on home security systems.
