Karen While Living in Her “Sick House”

Husband's Death From Cancer Led To Creation Of Energems For Geopathic Stress And EMF Protection

Karen Y. Mileson of Snowmass Village, CO, reveals the story of how her husband's death from cancer inspired her to conduct research that later led to the creation of Energems and the establishment of Energetics International, Inc.

The cause of her husband's cancer had been a mystery, and Karen herself started suffering from various neurological symptoms after her husband died from cancer some 20 years ago. She then began what she felt was her life-or-death search to uncover the cause of her symptoms and its connection to her husband's death from cancer. Her research led to the creation of Energems that can be used for protection from geopathic stress and toxicity from electromagnetic frequencies (EMFs).

Mileson explains, "My husband always seemed healthy. However, he suddenly started suffering from seizures and he was diagnosed with kidney cancer. This had metastasized to the brain and two tumors in his brain were causing the seizures."

While her husband received treatment, Karen researched the illness but nobody was able to say what had caused the cancer. One year after he passed away, Karen started to become very sick herself. This led her to become even more committed to finding out the cause of the problem. She recalls, "I was fighting for my survival when I discovered that our 'sick house' was actually the problem. We had built and designed our dream home, but it became our nightmare. I was wheelchair bound and knew I had to move, which is when I went to Colorado."

What Karen discovered was something that the late Hans Nieper, M.D., author, NASA scientist and doctor to many celebrities, including Ronald Reagan during his presidency, and many other researchers and doctors had also found: geopathic stress. Indeed, Nieper's research showed that some 92% of chronically ill people actually live in 'sick houses.' Karen used this research as basis for creating Energems.

Energems are designed to provide protection against toxic energies in a home, including those from EMFs. As such, it is a multi-pronged attack against the natural radiation from the earth and the electromagnetic fields created by the various electronic devices used today.

Karen became passionate and was driven to create solutions so that others would be able to stay healthy without suffering like herself and her husband. She explains her discoveries on various videos and texts on <http://energems.com/blog/>. Through her work, Karen was able to leave the wheelchair and even get back to her other passion of skiing. She is now 70 years old but she feels healthier than she has ever been. Her research continues, but she also takes time to go skiing as often as possible.

Energetics International, Inc. provides solutions for the ever increasing toxicity in homes and offices, water, food, supplements, and bodies. For more information visit <http://www.energems.com>.

Energetics International, Inc.

Energems were created as a result of my husband's death and my illness from our Sick House. Our Sick House was the result of geopathic stress from the earth and EMF radiation from electricity.
