January 28, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

LiveEco recently announced that they have launched a new product onto the Amazon marketplace. The company states that their fun, emoji pencil erasers for kids are now available for purchase.

Christina Abels, a representative for the company says, "These erasers are super fun for kid to use. They are the perfect award for classrooms and they make wonderful little gifts for parties, especially when paired with our emoji gift bags."

Abels says that the company's emoji erasers come in a pack of 60, which includes five each of 12 emoji faces. The erasers are BPA free and safe for children. They are hypoallergenic and contain no latex. The company states that they only offer products that are safe for families and for the environment.

"Teachers and parents will find it so much easier to motivate their children to do schoolwork when they have fun erasers on their pencils," Abels adds. "Our emoji erasers are great because they come in large packs of 60, so there are plenty to go around, and kids love the designs."

Abels says that the erasers are the perfect funny classroom awards for teachers. Many teachers use school supplies as gift incentives for getting children to complete homework on time or for rewards when children reach certain milestones or make good grades. The company states that these erasers are fun for kids and affordable for parents and teachers.

Ables says that the erasers have received a number of positive reviews on the company's Amazon page. She says that they work well, erasing clean every time and are safe for kids to use, unlike a number of other products on the market today. Those who are interested can read more about the erasers and all of the family safe and environmentally friendly products that are sold by LiveEco by visiting them on their official Amazon sellers page.

Emojis became very popular with the growing popularity of social media sites like Facebook and with texting. Over the past few holiday seasons, emoji pillows and other products were high selling items for kids and teenagers. Abels says that these emoji erasers are just as popular as other emoji products and they serve a dual purpose; they provide a fun item for children and help them with the same functionality of a traditional pencil eraser.

LiveEco states that they offer products that are fun and creative but that are also safe. Abels says that parents or teachers who want a guaranteed method for inspiring children to do their homework or those who just want something fun for parties or school rewards can now purchase their new erasers through the Amazon website. Abels states that their inventory is high right now, but as these erasers are seen by children and more and more people become aware that they exist, that could change. She says that anyone who wants to add these to their child reward arsenal should visit them today to learn more.

LiveEco says that they always welcome feedback from their customers. The company states that anyone who has ordered and used the erasers is welcome to leave them a review on their Amazon page. Current reviews for the company's emoji erasers are all positive. Those who would like to read those reviews can visit the company online. Many teachers have come forward and stated that these are fun and creative items that they are actively using to encourage children to do their best in school, and they state that children are actively reaching milestones just to win their own emoji eraser.

Those who are interested in learning more about the emoji erasers or the emoji bags that LiveEco offers can visit them on their seller's page on the Amazon marketplace. The company says that they are always open to answering any questions that consumers may have about their products, and states that those who would like to contact them can do so through Amazon or via email.
