Wyckoff Home Protection Pros say, "The new systems today use wireless connections that send and receive images and signals which can be viewed live on a cell phone, computer or television."

The new wireless systems require no landline service they simply need a receiver, camera, and a transmitter. The more elaborate systems can contain more devices and keep track of large amounts of applications. Now homeowners can take advantage of wireless systems that are budget appealing and simple to use and will be installed by professionals from Wyckoff Home Protection Pros making sure that the system is set up correctly and securely from being accessed by outsiders.
