Oak Forest Home Protection Pros has announced the expansion of the home security services in Oak Forest, Illinois and surrounding areas. The company supplies security systems and installs them in homes and properties in Oak Forest and neighboring areas. They take pride in providing top quality customer service when it comes to security systems. More information about their services can be obtained from their website and at <https://www.pressadvantage.com/organization/oak-forest-home-protection-pros>.

A spokesperson for Oak Forest Home Protection Pros says, "With the expansion of our home security services in Oak Forest and nearby areas, we expect to provide even better services to homeowners and property owners. Many people don't know that you can personally monitor your home from anywhere, while you're out-and-about. Arm your system from anywhere with a mobile app (no land-line phone required). Ask for the top-rated app that comes free with premium service plans. Free service plan quotes from Oak Forest Protection Pros are provided with no-obligation in the Oak Forest, IL area."

The spokesperson explains that home security is an important component of any household. Homes are expensive investments, after all, and lives are infinitely more important. Thus, protecting the property and the people living in them is vital. The good news is that while home security systems in the past have been quite expensive, today's advanced home security solutions are now more affordable while offering even more features such as making it possible to view the home or store, loved ones and pets, even while the homeowner or property owner is in a different location.

The usual way of keeping a house secure, such as locks for doors and windows, well-trimmed shrubs, and outdoor lighting will help in discouraging robbers from entering the property. However, some criminals may be sophisticated enough to get through those locks. Having a home security system will provide homeowners or property owners peace of mind because they are able to monitor what is happening in the home or property even while they are away. Also, these modern home security systems can be customized to fit the specific needs of the family. For instance, a household may have an elderly person with Alzheimer's disease. Motion sensors can be integrated into the security system so that alerts are sent to family members whenever a person passes certain areas, such as doorways and the like. And while pets have been a problem with these motion sensors in the past, this is no longer a problem today because the sensors are now capable of differentiating pet activity from other kinds of movements in the home.

An important role for a home security system is to prevent a home invasion. Statistics indicate that a break-in occurs somewhere in the United States every eight to 15 seconds, which has resulted into an average loss of $1,700 for homeowners. Thus, more and more property owners are now including home invasion protection in their security systems, especially for newly constructed homes.

Home protection alarm systems will include the fitting of doors and windows with sensors that warn homeowners if they are opened. And the traditional protection bars for doors and windows can still contribute a lot to the security of the home. Window bars are now available in classy and simple designs so homeowners and property owners need not worry about these bars damaging the stylish look of their homes.

According to the spokesperson, Oak Forest Home Protection Pros provides various kinds of home security systems that can fit specific budgets and requirements. These include wireless motion sensors, night vision technology, adjustable pan/tilt video monitoring, wireless home security app, tamper-resistant security systems, and home monitoring systems. They also provide free quotes on home security systems.
