February 11, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

A recent study shows that China and Indonesia are among the fastest growing producers of essential oils in the world. Currently, the top five emergency countries in essential oil production are India, China, Indonesia, the United States and Canada. Rising awareness of the benefits of essential oils have led to this rapidly growing manufacturing trend. Many companies, particularly those in Indonesia, have begun high quality production of essential oils in an effort to feed the world market.

Essential oils are being used for a wide range of health benefits. Scientific research into essential oils show that they are being effectively used for stress relief, to help combat sleep deprivation, and a study done by the Journal of Oncology Letters suggests that certain essential oils may be used effectively to treat some cancers.

Additional research has shown that the essential oil market in India is expected to grow substantially between 2017 and 2023. New health benefit information, and a general knowledge of consumers about these health benefits, has led to developing countries such as China and Indonesia to begin producing essential oils at an amazingly higher rate.

Utama Spice Bali is a small company in Bali, Indonesia that is part of this study. Utama Spice began as a small company, adhering to the Balinese concept of Tri Hita Karana, which keeps them committed to respecting and harmoniously working with nature, humanity and the divine. Ria Templer, a representative for the company says, "We take pride in the quality of our products. Everything that we do is done to ensure the highest possible quality and the purest product available."

The company recently made headlines when it announced that it focused on producing their products from locally sourced products in an attempt to stimulate the local market. In addition, Utama Spice offers opportunities for the women of Bali, employing several women who are working to better their lives and the lives of their families.

"We keep our community in mind in everything that we do," says Templer. "We are pleased to be included in the surge of essential oil products that are quality made that are currently making their way across the world. We understand the benefits of essential oils and want nothing more than to help the world to also realize these benefits."

Templer states that the company offers the highest possible quality of essential oils, providing only the most natural methods for developing their products. Templer says that while essential oils in general are becoming popular across the world, it is important to note that these oils should be legitimately sourced and come from actual natural products. She says that there are a number of products on the market that do not fit in with the quality that one would expect from natural essential oils.

Utama Spice states that they are pleased to be helping to bring Indonesia to the forefront of the world's essential oil production. Studies indicate that various Asian countries are likely to continue to raise the stakes with regards to who is producing the most essential oils. Templer says that Indonesia has a major advantage due to the locally growing and natural elements that they have access to.

Utama Spice focuses on high quality and locally sourced products while working to build their community into an increasingly thriving marketplace. The company is still relatively small, but states that they are on a path of consistent growth, and continue to employ even more community members who are working to build better lives for themselves. The company states that they will maintain their small company mentality while staying aligned with the natural products market and helping their community to prosper.
