February 11, 2019 -

Campfire Travel has just released its February edition, alongside Campfire Travel For Dog Owners. While both are must-have eMagazines for avid travelers and those with a passion for camping, the latter is geared specifically towards dog owners that take their pet companions into the wilderness with them. It is the 4th edition in the dog owner series since February last year.

Launched in Delaware by Chedall LLC, Campfire Travel has come a long way, and its eMagazines have focused on 4-5 states across North America in each of its editions. It generally showcases attractive holiday spots in the area, but this February also includes an edition focused on dog owners.

In its efforts to connect with those that seek the thrills and entertainment of the outdoor variety, the magazines? online platform has been encouraging photographers to post their pictures and enabling them to participate through SMS for attractive offers. The Campfire Travel and Campfire Travel for Dog Owners eMagazines are specially designed for tablet devices, in yet another effort to keep mobile-specific apps in mind. Mobile devices are far more convenient to access while on the move. These apps are specially designed to keep their travelers engaged in activities like games and include features such as a resort finder directory that updates the traveler on nearby locations. It also offers advice on good camping spots.

Utilizing its wide audience across social media platforms like Facebook and Twitter, the eMagazines offer a base from which travelers may interact with other campers, and even invite their friends to join a community of wilderness lovers and explorers. Through the magazines and their e-platforms, Campfire Travel and Campfire Travel for Dog Owners hope to build a network of travelers from specific states and provide information on locations available for a fun-loving holiday. Resources like this would help people cope with a stressful lifestyle by providing getaways in and around the state where they reside. It is a magazine for those looking for exclusive vacation locations away from the city. Those aspiring for a quiet holiday close to nature, either alone or with their dear ones, would find Campfire Travel an interesting read, and those whose pets join them on their adventures would find Campfire Travel for Dog Owners a similarly invaluable resource.

The magazines provide an opportunity for those looking for pure fun to share their experiences on the website. These experiences come in a variety of flavors, including tips for beginners, dos-and-don'ts when camping in winter, things to carry when camping, how to set up recreational vehicles, recipes, and many more. The list is as colorful as the people who share their stories in it. These informative tips to readers prepare them for an exciting experience of holidaying in camps. Besides this, available campgrounds and RV resorts near a user?s location can be easily traced, and directions downloaded for the user?s convenience. All the information is readily available at their fingertips. Each edition offers something for everyone, from advice and information to the ability to connect with other travelers through photo, trivia, or SMS competitions.

Campfire Travel for Dog Owners goes the extra mile beyond these services as well. Carrying your pet for a vacation requires a greater degree of preparedness. The eMagazine, with its expertise, helps dog owners plan their excursions with their furry friends better. A walkthrough on making a trip more adventurous with a dog is now available in the new February edition. It is an exciting experience for a traveler and his/her pet to live in a camp, as it offers unique challenges, and it can be great fun as well for both owner and four-footed friend.

Campfire Travel TV provides yet another platform for campers to share experiences captured on video, uploaded to the website for the entire community to enjoy. These captured memories go a long way to help explorers remember each holiday, and share in the joys of their fellows when they are caught up in the daily grind.

Camping and RV enthusiasts looking for entertainment and news can visit the magazines? website, at https://www.campfiretravel.com/emagazines, which provides more detailed information and access to past editions of both magazines. They may also get in touch with David Hall of Chedall LLC.
