San Leandro Tree Leaders Discusses Importance Of Professional Tree Service

February 14, 2019

February 14, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

San Leandro Tree Leaders in San Leandro, California recently discussed the importance of using a professional tree service provider in San Leandro for certain tasks. The company provides tree removal and pruning services, and states that having a professional on hand to provide these services is crucial for a number of reasons.

Kevin Bremand, a representative for the company says, "Tree removal service is one that is best left to professionals due to safety reasons. Someone who does not know what they are doing could cause harm to property or to others on the property if they attempt to remove a tree themselves."

Bremend states that removing a tree, particularly by those who have never done this job before, can pose a danger to people and property. He states that there have been numerous people injured by falling branches and entire trees and that professionals have the equipment and the knowledge needed to safely remove trees without incident.

Bremend says that those who are interested can learn more about the services that his company provides by

He states that they hire only experienced professionals and that all of their technicians know how to carefully and effectively remove a tree, without causing damage to homes or property around the tree or to anyone who may be on the ground around the area where the tree is being removed.

The Tree Care Industry Association reports that around 580 people died in accidents involving tree trimming and removal between 2009 and 2015. Bremand says that this is too many. "This is nearly 600 people who died because they lacked the equipment or knowledge needed to safely remove that tree," Bremand states. "And that is not even including the number of people who are sent to emergency rooms every year because they were injured by a falling tree. It takes a professional to keep these numbers down."

Bremend states that the company has years of experience in providing tree removal and trimming services and that they always urge their customers to never attempt to remove trees or heavy branches themselves. He states that those customers can contact the company and they will provide a quote for the cost of the needed services. He adds that their website offers more information about the services that they offer as well as direct contact information and their regular hours of operation. Those interested can visit the company online to learn more.

Chainsaws are commonly used in tree removal. A study done by a prominent medical journal shows that there were more than 100,000 emergency room visits for injuries that were caused by chainsaw use between 2009 and 2013. Of these, more than 90 percent were injuries to regular consumers who tried to trim or remove a tree themselves. The majority of the injuries involved cuts or lacerations, and the study shows that most of these emergency room visits happened between September and November, when most homeowners feel the need to trim or remove their trees in anticipation of winter weather.

Bremend states that these emergency room visits equate to hundreds of thousands of dollars in medical expenses for those who are injured, not counting the time that they must take away from work and other activities while they recuperate from those injuries. He says that these figures alone should show consumers that it is never wise to attempt to do their own tree services, particularly when there are qualified professionals who can do the job without incident.

The company urges those in the San Leandro area to strongly consider the repercussions of attempting their own tree service. Bremand states that they are always available to provide a quote for these services and that they work with consumers to provide the specific service needed based on budget and scheduling that fits the consumer's need.
