

Mason Seifert Real Estate Photography Announces Updated Pricing Structure

February 27, 2019

February 27, 2019 -

Mason Seifert Photography has announced a new pricing structure. The photographer recently announced that he has updated his pricing, which is now visible on his website, to be among the most competitive in the industry. Seifert provides real estate photography and drone video, as well as home walkthrough videos for real estate professionals who want to up their marketing game.

Based in Hartland, Wisconsin, Seifert states that he offers his services in a wide area around his home base. "I have traveled to Chicago and further, into Indiana and throughout Michigan to help real estate professionals to offer a more in-depth look at their available properties."

Seifert says that along with new pricing information, his website also offers a map that outlines his service area. He states that he specializes in both residential and commercial real estate photos and videos, as well as landscape photography and architectural images. A complete list of his services can be seen on his website at <https://masonseifert.com/>.

Seifert states that he offers a number of photography services for real estate professionals or homeowners who prefer to work on their own without an agent. His offered services include listing photos of the interior and exterior of residential and commercial properties, aerial photography of the exterior, one minute exterior videos, interior walk through videos, and editing with professional software to make his images stand out amongst the others in the industry. He states that anyone in the Southern Wisconsin area can contact him for a drone video setup and he will provide a full real estate photography package within just 24 hours of the shoot.

“Photography is something that I am passionate about,” Seifert says. “In order to be good at anything, you have to be passionate. I thoroughly enjoy helping clients to get the best images and videos to show their properties.”

Seifert has a number of reviews from past clients on his website as well. He states that he has provided images and videos for more than 200 houses, and his clients praise him for his friendly and professional demeanor, as well as for the quality of his images. One client states that he, “Took his time to capture the right picture instead of rushing to the next appointment even with his busy schedule.” Clients also comment that Seifert’s pricing structure is more than competitive in the market, and that they prefer his personalization as opposed to larger photography companies.

Those who are interested can learn more about Seifert and his photography services by visiting him online at <https://mason-seifert-photography.business.site>. His website highlights his new pricing structure, which offers three basic packages that range in what they provide for clients. Real estate professionals can visit the website to learn more about his prices or to use the online form to contact him to schedule an appointment.

His contact information is readily available on the website, as well, for those who would prefer to reach out to him via phone or email. His blog on the site offers a more detailed look at the packages that he offers, and he provides a gallery of images and drone videos for those who are considering these services.

Seifert states that one of the most important aspects of listing a property for sale, particularly on the internet, is to offer clear pictures of the property. He states that his photography is designed to provide these images, and adds that he produces them so that they will highlight the most attractive features of each property. His years of experience in real estate photography help him to know what sells, and he states that he has a keen eye for picking out aspects of a property that buyers will want to see.

Those interested in learning more about Seifert or seeing his new pricing packages can do so on his website or simply contact Seifert with any questions or to schedule a photography session.
