February 22, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Dr. Randy Wong with Honolulu Plastic Surgery has announced a new program for moms. The plastic surgeon states that his office is now providing mommy makeover Honolulu options for those who are looking to make a change.

"Being a new mom is hard enough with the lack of sleep and the hormones," says Dr. Wong. "We wanted to offer something that will help new moms to feel more like themselves. Having a baby can be a bit traumatic on the body. We want to help moms to get their old bodies back and feel that self-confidence that they had before they got pregnant."

Dr. Wong states that his office provides a number of treatment options for moms who are looking to lose weight, tighten or tone their bodies or generally just gain back their self-confidence. He says that moms, or anyone who is looking to make a physical change, can learn more about their options by visiting his office on their website.

"The main complaint that we hear from new moms is that they want those tight abs once again," says Dr.

Wong. ?Stretch marks, flabby bellies and other concerns can make a mother doubt herself. These issues can really wreak havoc on a woman's self-esteem, and we can help moms to get back to their pre-pregnancy body types.?

Through the Honolulu Plastic Surgery Center, Dr. Wong helps a number of men and women to raise their self-confidence levels. He says that flabby skin can be eliminated with tummy tucks, where the flap of skin and fat in the belly area are removed and the skin pulled tighter to create a smoother look in the abdominal region.

Dr. Wong states that his office also provides liposuction, which can help to remove the fat that may have accumulated in the tummy region during pregnancy. He states that any woman who has recently gone through childbirth or had a cesarean section birth can contact his office for a consultation. During the initial consultation, Dr. Wong says that he can give new moms an idea of what can be done to help them to get back to the body that they desire. He speaks with each patient on an individual basis. He states that the procedure will depend on a number of factors and that he will discuss all of these factors with the patient during the consultation, giving the new mom a number of options that will help her to gain back her self-esteem.

For mothers who opt for breastfeeding, Dr. Wong says that sagging or drooping breasts could become an issue. After the breastfeeding has stopped, when the mother weans the baby onto a bottle or off of breastmilk completely, he can consult with the mother about her options regarding breast augmentation, which will tighten the breasts and make them less deflated and loose.

Dr. Wong states that he offers a number of procedures to deal with virtually any body complaint that new mothers may have. He states that those who are interested can learn more about their options by visiting his office online at <http://honoluluplasticsurgerycenter.com/>. Based in Honolulu, Dr. Wong states that he has helped women from all over the nation to get back the bodies that they want after childbirth.

Dr. Wong states that having a child is a wonderful experience and that feelings of being different are completely normal for new mothers. He says that having a child does not have to mean that new mothers are stuck with saggy skin and self-confidence issues for the rest of their lives. His new mother options can help moms to tighten their skin and get back the bodies that they had before they became mothers. Dr. Wong urges anyone who is interested in learning more to visit him online or to reach out to his office directly by phone or email to schedule an initial consultation to go over their options for a variety of plastic surgery procedures.
