TeeHeeCo in Columbus, Ohio has announced that they are now offering a full range of gardening essentials for enthusiasts. The company states that they are dedicated to providing a way for consumers to begin their indoor growing journey. They offer a wide range of hydroponics, grow lights and other indoor gardening essentials.

Donald Elsass, a representative for the online gardening store says, "We have an online store and a traditional store in Columbus. We strive to provide all of the products that our customers need for their indoor growing purposes and have a large inventory of products that are ready to purchase in-store or to be shipped today."

Elsass says that the store is dedicated to helping consumers who want to grow their own food or other plants. He states that the company belief is that the industry lacks when it comes to offering customers exactly what they need for their growing purposes, and that TeeHeeCo is dedicated to being different. He states that the online store offers everything that can be found in the traditional store location. Those currently residing in or around Columbus can use the online store to get an idea of what is available or those outside the area can order from the online store. Elsass says that most products are available for two-day delivery to customers anywhere in the nation.

"Spring planting and growing time is nearly upon us," Elsass says. "That means that it is time for those who want to grow their own plants to start thinking about raising seeds into plants that can be transferred into gardens when it's time to plant outdoors. We have everything that one would need to start their own seedlings and have a garden that is lush and filled with fruits and vegetables for the summer growing season."

The company offers a full range of hydroponics and gardening accessories including systems and components, pump protectors and filters, meters, pots and containers, irrigation supplies, and more. Elsass says that even for first-time gardeners, they offer everything needed to get gardening started and raise all types of plants for the coming seasons.

The National Gardening Association or NGA estimates that around 35 percent of all households in the United States currently grow their own gardens every year. These numbers have raised more than 200 percent from just 10 years ago. Currently, most rural households have at least a small garden during the spring and summer months, and many families use these gardens to help lower their food costs throughout the year.

Canning homegrown vegetables and fruits has become almost as popular today as it was a century ago, with more and more families learning the basics of canning in order to preserve their summer harvests for the year. Freezer sales have also increased over the past few years and more and more families are learning how to properly freeze homegrown vegetables to keep them preserved until they are needed, often late into the winter months.

The NGA reports that even younger people are now engaging in growing their own food and learning to preserve those foods in an effort to keep food on the table throughout the year and to lower their overall food costs. Gardening is a much less expensive way to enjoy fresh fruits and vegetables as opposed to purchasing them in grocery stores. Seeds are less expensive than the finished product, which is the basis for families around the nation learning to grow their own food.

Elsass says that the company strives to offer consumers everything that they will need to grow their own gardens and keep food on the table throughout the year.
