Columbus, OH (March 8, 2019) - As a leading law firm in the U.S., Carlile Patchen & Murphy LLP has announced that it will represent financial advisors who are owed trailing commissions from Ohio National Life. The firm's securities practice group, headed by Dennis J. Concilla, represents advisors in the U.S. who are suffering from significant financial damages due to Ohio National Life's decision to discontinue payments on trailing commissions for its existing GMIB variable annuities. The insurance company announced their decision on September 28th, 2018, which prompted many advisors and broker-dealers to contact CPM's office to inquire about the next steps to take to protect their rights and pursue legal action.

On November 6, 2018, Carlile Patchen & Murphy LLP filed the first nationwide class action lawsuit against Ohio National Life representing advisors and broker-dealers who sold the annuity policies. The legal team at CPM is committed to fighting for the rights of advisors seeking justice against Ohio National Life.
