March 19, 2019

March 19, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Grand Roofer Services in Wilmington, North Carolina has announced that they are now offering commercial and residential roofing services to those in the area. The Wilmington roofing contractor offers a wide range of services and provides free estimates for their customers.

Ray Johnson, a representative for the company says, "We are pleased to be offering our services to home and business owners in Wilmington. We take care of everything from small roof patches to complete roofing replacements, and we provide emergency repairs for those in need."

Johnson says that the company is available around the clock, at night, on weekends and throughout holidays to provide emergency roof repair for those who are affected by storms. The company offers roofing inspections and repairs to those in and around the Wilmington area, and provides affordable and durable roofing installations in a wide range of colors and materials.

"We also do roof cleaning," says Johnson. "Roof cleaning can be essential in protecting a roof and keeping it from succumbing to damage from leaves and other debris that may be built up on it."

Johnson says that the company is providing free quotes to customers for all of their roofing needs. More on their services and credentials can be seen at <https://grand-roofing.com/>. Johnson says that anyone in need of roofing repairs, or those who are not sure of what they need but want to have their roof inspected, can call on the company to request a free quote.

In addition to home and business roofs, the company also provides services for garage roofs, as well as home siding installation and repairs and dormer window installation. Johnson states that customers, whether they are remodeling their home or building a new one, can call on the company to have all of their exterior taken care of.

The company states that their emergency services are designed to help customers who have been affected by storms. North Carolina has seen a number of heavy wind and rain storms over the past year. Johnson states that as a direct result of these storms, many homes and businesses have experienced leaky roofs.

Johnson says that the company employs only the most qualified staff members, all of whom have experience in roofing and other similar services. He states that the company will never try to convince a customer that they need something that they do not.

“There are so many roofing companies that will try to talk a customer into a new roof when all they really need is a simple repair job,” says Johnson. “We pride ourselves on our commitment to our customers. We ensure that each customer knows exactly what is needed and why, and we will walk through the process with them so that they know exactly what to expect.”

Johnson states that the company offers special financing services for those in need of a new roof, and that those who are interested can learn more about these options on the company’s website. He states that all of their quotes are no-obligation. Customers are not forced into anything that they do not need or want.

The company urges those who have not had their roofs inspected in some time to contact them as soon as possible to schedule a free roof inspection, where technicians will thoroughly check the roof for any issues that could lead to leaks. Leaky roofs are the cause of a number of interior remodeling needs. When a leak is present but not properly fixed, it can lead to ceiling damage and damage to walls, floors and furnishings, which could be quite costly to repair. Johnson says that a simple free roof inspection could help homeowners to avoid these costly issues in the future.

The company states that those who are interested in learning more about their new services to Wilmington customers can visit them on their official website for a complete listing of their available services, as well as their service areas.
