March 26, 2019 -

Atoka, Oklahoma ? This is a question asked by all good parents when trying to help their children learn to love books and reading. According to Publishers Weekly, there are 42,000 new children?s books published each year, so the parent?s dilemma is to find good children?s books and which books should be avoided has been solved.

Dr. Qooz, (pronounced, plural of Q,) International Children?s Book author, debuts his fourth book that answers parent?s and teacher?s questions of how to make quality book selections for their children and students.

This children?s book author is the creator of the Fargone Series, that starts with the book, "Who Are You?", an animal class of the NoWay jungle that receives a new classmate from the distant land of Fargone. The first day of school meters out some teasing, bullying, and eventually the common thread of friendship.

The continuation of the Fargone Saga has the inquisitive class questioning Gerri on how he arrived in their jungle if there are no roads, no airport, no boats or trains that can easily bring outsiders to the jungle community. The next book, "Where Are We?", answers this question with a class field trip that takes the band of animals on a time travel adventure to a real destination that is fueled with the children?s imagination and participation.

Dr. Qooz?s latest book, From Tree to Twelve, From Noses to Toes-es, is a counting book for new schoolers. This unique approach to counting encourages the child to identify with common items, visualize the number and combine the objects with primary math principles.
