March 26, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

UK based Orion Global Managed Services is pleased to announce a partnership with non-profit Computer Aid.

In today's world, computers are an essential part of daily life. They allow processing information, communicating with one another, collecting data, and much, much more. Without computers, and the experts that help the general population keep them maintained, the modern world would quickly collapse. Fortunately for those who depend on technology, companies like Orion Global Managed Services offers a multitude of IT services. With over 30 years of combined experience in global IT, the company works with all types of clients, from individuals, to start-up companies, to successful business chains that have locations across the world. One of the largest global IT companies of its kind, the business allows and encourages their clients to collaborate with any of their 6,000 IT engineers located around the world at any hour of the day or night.

Because of the diversity of the Orion Global Managed Services IT team, the company can help individuals and businesses with almost any computer related issue. The company offers 24/7 international IT support and maintenance, on demand IT support resources, worldwide EPOS installs and support, site signal surveys and analysis, cyber security, GDPR compliance and consultancy, and much more. Orion Global Managed Services is proud to say that they have engineers on their team that specialize in a variety of technologies so their clients will always have someone who can find a solution to their technological problems, no matter how specific they might be.

What makes Orion Global Managed Services stand out from similar companies is their excellent customer support. The international IT company has engineers located in over 150 countries around the world, clients who use the company's services are able to speak to an engineer that is fluent in their language, is familiar with technical issues and solutions native to their area, and is professionally trained and highly skilled. Orion Global strives to serve their many clients in the best way they can, but their paying clients aren't the only ones who receive help from the IT company. Orion Global is excited to announce their new partnership with Computer Aid, a nonprofit organization that has helped more than 14.5 million people across the world by providing 260,000 computers to vulnerable communities in over 100 different countries. By partnering with Computer Aid, Orion Global Managed Services will be helping to build a digital hub in Malezi Kenya. The Malezi region in Kenya is considered by many to be one of the most at-risk areas in the country due to a small population, lack of sanitation, and security problems. The companies will work together to fund the tech hub, educating and certifying 25 local teachers in IT skills before having them teach students in IT and computer classes.

Once it is up and running, the digital hub will welcome students from Malezi and other surrounding areas, changing countless lives in the process. "As part of our ongoing Corporate Social Responsibility Policy, it is important that we work with charities such as Computer Aid, who strive to enable education through IT in some of the world's poorest regions," commented Chris Liversidge, CEO of Orion Global. "We are proud to offer our services and support alongside other IT companies and manufacturers, such as Dell, who also work closely with Computer Aid International. We look forward to seeing the completion of the digital hub over the course of the year and the positive impact it will have in the region."
