March 27, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Rockwell Trading Services LLC is committed to helping new traders simplify trading. The company has released a brand new training video with an easy to follow trading routine.

The video, titled "My Trading Routine", contains exclusive information useful to anyone getting started with trading. It is also suitable for more advanced traders who have been trading for a while but are having trouble hitting profit targets or are losing money due to the lack of having a system to follow.

Rockwell Trading states that "My Trading Routine" is an easy to follow guide providing information necessary to understand trading and reach desired results. The training discusses what to trade, when to place a trade and when to exit. It is a great tool for anyone looking to get started, as it makes trading much less intimidating.

The company truly believes that there is a less complicated way, and thus this simple strategy was created.

When asked for more information about "My Trading Routine" and the reasons behind creating it, Markus

Heitkoetter, CEO of Rockwell Trading Services LLC said, "People are skeptical about trading because they are not well educated about it. What they really have to know about trading are these three things: what to trade, when to trade and how to exit with a loss and profit."

Interested parties are invited to view the video in full by visiting the following website:

On the video page, Rockwell Trading is also offering interested parties a one-on-one demo of the company's trading system, the PowerX Optimizer.
