As the building boom in America continues, the construction industry turns to Crane Network to provide the best place to find construction cranes for sale and rent. The Illinois company offers an online marketplace that makes it easier for those in need of construction cranes to find cranes to purchase or rent or for those looking to sell their commercial cranes.

Paul Paliwoda, a representative for the company says, ?We have been helping to connect crane sellers and buyers for more than 20 years. Our online marketplace makes it easier for those in need of cranes to find and purchase what they need without the hassles of a middleman or the expense of a brokerage company.?

Paliwoda says that the company has multiple listings of cranes for rent or sale. He says that with the current building increase in the nation, many construction companies have found themselves in need of cranes, and while many companies will instantly buy new, Crane Network offers another solution.

?Cost is a major factor when it comes to purchasing anything for a business,? says Paliwoda. ?Our marketplace sets up sellers of used cranes with buyers. Used cranes are a much less expensive option, and the perfect option for many companies who may simply not have the capital needed to buy a brand new machine.?

The company states that they currently have multiple listings for crane sales, as well as crane rentals and various parts and supplies for construction companies. Paliwoda states that Crane Network has the most comprehensive listing of cranes for rent or sale in the nation.

The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics shows that during the first quarter of 2018, construction jobs were readily available. Many companies were struggling to find enough employees to carry out the jobs that they had. This building boom has only grown since then, making the need for construction workers and construction equipment critical. Studies indicate that more building has gone on during the last quarter of 2018 than in the past 10 years in the United States. Paliwoda says that these numbers are expected to continue to increase over the new quarter or longer.

?This increase in building means an increase in the need for quality construction equipment,? says Paliwoda. ?Crane Network fills that need by putting buyers with sellers. Our marketplace has a comprehensive listing of cranes and other equipment, everything that a construction company will need to take part in this building boom.?

Paliwoda says cranes and other construction equipment are sold in the marketplace directly by the owner of that equipment. The site currently has tens of thousands of users from all over the world who have joined, registered and verified their account information, giving buyers peace of mind when it comes to spending their company capital on construction equipment.

Paliwoda adds that once a member has registered, they can begin to look through the marketplace to find the equipment that their company needs. He states that the site is a good resource for those who are looking to sell or buy used cranes, and states that because members purchase directly from other members, there are no third-party fees associated with those sales.

Crane Network includes categorized listings for industrial and truck mounted cranes, knuckle boom cranes, wood chippers, forklifts, backhoes and various other construction equipment. The marketplace also has listings for a number of construction equipment parts and accessories including seal kits, filters and more. Paliwoda says that they currently have listings for a wide range of well-known manufacturers including JLG, National, Liebherr and many others.

Construction companies that are interested in learning more can visit Crane Network LLC on their marketplace website. Paliwoda says that registration takes only minutes and once registered, companies gain access to the thousands of cranes that the marketplace currently has available, as well as those for rent or lease. Direct contact information for Crane Network as well as other related resources can be found on the marketplace.
