New York, NY - Recently, there have been a number of bankruptcy rule changes that not only apply to consumer bankruptcies but, affect secured creditors as well. The primary beneficiary of the changes to Bankruptcy Rule 3002 (Filing Proof of Claim or Interest) are debtors since in voluntary Chapter 7, 12 or 13 bankruptcy cases, a proof of claim must now be filed no later than 70 days after the bankruptcy filing date. While this rule change offers more predictability and speeds up the the bankruptcy process, the new rules are also significantly more time-restrictive for the creditors and requires them to prepare and file their proof of claim more expeditiously.
