Riverside County, CA - Personal Injury Attorney in Riverside County, Kevin Cortright, has released a Youtube video explaining how he can help those that have been injured in an accident. Personal injury claims are any physical or mental injuries that have happened to a person as a result of someone else?s negligence or even a harmful act.

Despite common belief, accidents that apply to personal injury cases are not only car accidents, but instead also cover accidents such as bicycle accidents, dog bites, pedestrian accidents, etc. There are three different types of reward that one can get from a personal injury case, including actual damages, punitive damages, and loss of future earnings. When one wins a case for actual damages, they are entitled to compensation for all of the things that cost money in relation to the accident. This can include but isn?t limited to medical bills, vehicle or property damage, lost work time, ambulance transportation, legal expenses, etc. When one wins a case for punitive damages, the person or business that caused the injury is found to have been negligent or it is determined that they have intentionally caused damages. Punitive damages are a court?s way of punishing the wrongdoer by making them pay more above and beyond the actual damages for the victim?s pain and suffering ? including emotional damages because they caused the pain on purpose. In cases where one wins loss of future earnings, those that have injuries that leave them unable to work permanently, work long term, or cause them to earn much less than they did before they were injured are able to claim compensation for the loss of their future earnings as well.

No matter the type of injury, it?s important that injured parties talk to a personal injury attorney immediately in order to see what rights they have. Unfortunately, without an attorney most people that have been injured will be mistreated by insurance companies with interests only for themselves that would like to settle the claim as cheaply as possible.

With Kevin Cortright?s specialized knowledge in the field, he is able to help those injured in a personal injury accident to receive the full amount of compensation that they deserve. He can examine every aspect of the incident as well as the extend of impact it has had on the victim?s life, then is able to determine the best actions and steps forward to take in protecting the client?s best interest.

Kevin Cortright will make sure to identify all liable parties and pursue every possible angle of compensation, as well as make sure that the victim gets quality medical care in order for them to heal completely.
