

Data Recovery Service Gets New Five Star Reviews On Google

Hard Drive Recovery Group, a business based in Irvine, California, has announced with pride that they have received new five star reviews on Google. So far, the company has a perfect 5.0 star rating on Google. The company is a provider of safe and secure hard drive data recovery for PC and Mac hard drives. Every day, it is estimated that they recover several gigabytes of files and data for various companies and individuals across North America.

Maureen Davies, spokesperson for Hard Drive Recovery Group, said, "We are proud to announce that we have received new positive reviews on Google. These are five star reviews from clients, who have been very satisfied with our services. We have been providing data recovery services for over 15 years, and have recovered thousands of gigabytes of data. Our clients come to us with intentional deletions, fire and flood data loss, and many other accidental losses that the client thought would be unrecoverable - only to prove that data, in the hands of data recovery experts like HDRG, is never "unrecoverable". This is one of the many reasons why HDRG has a 99% customer retention rate and receives over 80% of our customer referrals from current clients."

Also, they want people to realize that it is always necessary to backup your data, and that not every hard drive data recovery needs a hands-on strategy. This is why they offer an easy to use software that allows people to recover data from data deletion or logical crashes. However, they would like to warn people that they need to consult the experts first. If they commit a mistake while trying to recover data by themselves, this might lead to permanent data loss. Those who want directions for getting to the offices of the Hard Drive Recovery Group can check out their Google Maps page.

The company wants to point out that all the data in a failed physical hard drive can be recovered as long as it's safe. First, the computer should be shut down immediately once there are indications of a problem with the hard drive. A buzzing or clicking drive may still work but the longer it runs, the greater will be the risk that the drive is physically damaged, thus making the data unrecoverable. Second, the hard drive should not be opened in any way as this may damage certain delicate parts, causing data to be lost forever. And lastly, people should avoid using data recovery software that do not come with a professional recommendation.

That the Hard Drive Recovery Group has been doing excellent work in recovering data is attested to the new five star reviews they have received on Google. Marcus S. gave the company five stars and said, "My PC's hard drive crashed, and unfortunately I had nothing backed up properly. I dropped the drive off with Hard Drive Recovery Group, and they ended up doing a fantastic job of getting all that data back. The price was also reasonable considering the work it took. I went with these guys because if they don't recover your data, they don't charge. It's nice to know that you're only paying when the job is complete."

And Curt M. also gave them five stars and said, "You wanna talk fast? Hard Drive Recovery Group took in my drive when they opened on Monday and I had all my data back by Tuesday afternoon thanks to their expedited service. Complete professionals, with a no excuse attitude. Love these guys!"

Hard Drive Recovery Group offers a number of advantages over other service providers. These include fast service, flat rate pricing, secure data recovery, live support staff, experienced technicians, and Class 100 clean rooms that are vital for safe data recovery.
