DMG Entertainment, a global media and entertainment company based in Beverly Hills, California, has posted a YouTube video that shows DMG founder and CEO Dan Mintz discussing the acquisition of Valiant Comics. As parent company of Valiant Entertainment, DMG Entertainment now plans to produce Valiant's large library of world-class intellectual property for the global entertainment space. Valiant is composed of more than 2,000 iconic characters and the full acquisition of Valiant by DMG Entertainment in 2018 also gave the greenlight for the filming of the first Valiant film, Bloodshot.

Dan Mintz explains, "Valiant properties are well known for their story-centric approach and emotionally compelling touchpoints. DMG Entertainment's cinematic creative vision and financing power will propel the Valiant universe toward a global audience, bringing these popular stories to new mediums and changing the way fans can interact with familiar characters. While this multi-platform initiative prioritizes both the cinematic and publishing landscapes, the intention is to expand the Valiant universe to gaming and theme parks in the future. DMG Entertainment already has Valiant-based projects in development, production, and post-production including television shows and feature films.?

Currently, DMG Entertainment is in production for the film ?Bloodshot? with Sony Pictures. Bloodshot is one of the most successful comic book series during the past 20 years with more than 100 issues published and lifetime sales of more than 7 million copies in different languages in various parts of the world.

The superhero Bloodshot is a soldier who was brought back to life by a team of scientists with use of nanotechnology. He became a bounty hunter for outcast superhumans. Vin Diesel plays the role of Bloodshot. Other upcoming films from the Valiant library are Harbinger, Faith, Shadowman, Quantum & Woody, Grace of Kings, and Mistborn.

Meanwhile, DMG Entertainment plans to make a $300 million investment in technology, entertainment and media.
