Glow Medspa has announced that they have recently opened their new location in Colleyville, Texas. The clinic is focused on laser hair removal, which means that they always ensure their treatments are up-to-date and that their technicians are well trained on the latest laser hair removal technology.

Imtiaz Khanji, spokesperson for Glow Medspa, says, "For years, we solely offered laser hair removal because we wanted to be the best at it. All the while our clients realized how hard it is to find a good medical spa that has experienced staff at all of their service offerings. Glow Medspa wanted to change that. We knew early on that the only way to achieve this is by providing the best possible results in the safest and most efficient manner possible. We have re-invested in excess of $500,000 in new technology, training, personnel, and are adding many new services from microneedling, skin rejuvenation, dermplaning, chemical peels, facials, and much more."

They point out that they are committed to always provide the gold standard in laser hair removal. They exclusively utilize Lumenis laser systems, which are considered to be the top of the line when it comes to the most advanced lasers for hair removal. It makes use of the Alexandrite and nd:Yag lasers, which totally revolutionized the laser hair removal industry, making the process fast, pain-free, and permanent.

The laser hair removal treatment provided at Glow Medspa Colleyville has various significant benefits. These include permanent hair removal, no more ingrown hairs, enhanced self-confidence, and savings in money and time. Unlike shaving or waxing, laser hair removal stops the growth of hair for the treated area once and for all by destroying the germ cells in the hair follicle. This means that there is no longer any need to keep going back for shaving and waxing. It has been estimated that an average individual in the US will spend approximately $5,000 to $7,000 in razors, shaving creams and after-shaving lotions for over a 40 year period. This doesn't even include the time spent on shaving and upkeep.

They also want to point out that laser hair removal is unique in that it can be performed in practically any part of the body and not just the common areas for hair removal like the underarms, arms, and legs. For instance, laser hair removal treatments can focus on whole facial area or certain parts of the face. The treatments can be performed in a single spot of the face or in areas that are treated in conjunction with each other. Most people don't realize that it is possible to target areas that are not "traditional" like the mid brow, upper lip, and chin. Consultation with a laser hair removal expert can help in identifying those areas that the client may want to be treated. For both men and women, they can make use of full arm and leg laser hair removal; full back, abdomen, and inner or full buttock laser hair removal; or the Brazilian laser hair removal.

Meanwhile, those who have already tried the laser hair removal service at Glow Medspa have expressed their satisfaction. For instance, Julianne B. says, "I have been going here for almost a year to get many areas treated and I can say, by far, this is the best place to go to. Not only are the staff super friendly but they are all very well educated in laser removal. Their prices are great, the environment is calming, and the decor is beautiful. They expanded at the beginning of 2017 and added more treatment rooms to shorten wait times. Professional, personable and willing to explain each part of the process."

The teams at Glow Medspa have 15 years of experience and have performed more than 100,000 treatments in laser hair removal. All of their technicians are certified and licensed, which means they comply with the highest standards for laser hair removal as specified by the State of Texas Department of Health.
