July 16, 2015 -

Murrieta, California's Riverside County Injury Lawyer Kevin Cortright has recently opened an office in a new location in Palm Springs. Murietta is the home of the Law Offices of Kevin Cortright, but they have now added a Palm Springs location to extend their services to more clients. The new office is located at Tahquitz Canyon Way, which is a convenient address for the firm's current clients who have sought help in their personal injury and workers compensation cases. Those who are looking for a Palm Springs personal injury attorney can now turn to this particular law office.

Cortright has helped thousands of clients from all over the USA. He received his education from La Verne College of Law and worked at 21st Century Insurance, a personal injury defense firm. He then started a law office in Murrieta that is committed to providing legal services with expertise in personal injury claims. Lawyers who are part of the law firm have specific legal practices, including personal injury, workers compensation, and bankruptcy.

The new office in Palm Springs is a big move for both the law firm as well as for the city. Sunny, a Palm Springs injury attorney and a Palm Springs workers compensation attorney, is excited to join the team. "I was hired by the firm about a month ago. I am aware of Cortright's reputation as a respected lawyer and I believe that his new office will be good for the city and the community," said Sunny.

Now with two offices (one in Murrieta and one in Palm Springs), the law office continues to spread its mission and vision to its clients. Helping personal injury clients who have been injured in an accident remains Cortright's forte. In most cases, clients did not receive the necessary coverage and fair settlement from insurance companies. In addition, he also has years of experience in helping clients with their workers compensation claims and benefits. The lawyer has provided his expertise on many cases and helped thousands. With a new location in Palm Springs, the law office has now extended its reach to potential clients as well as convenience.
