July 18, 2015 -
Adfilic, a business in Richmond, BC, Canada are happy to announce that they have received 590 reviews on Amazon after just listing their loud Bluetooth speakers there for just five months. To celebrate this, they have upgraded the speaker so that it has even more functionality. Now, they can connect to the speakers using micro SD card and Bluetooth, but also by using a USB disk drive. The business expects the positive reviews will continue to come in this way.

James Chien from Adfilic says, "We are so grateful for the many positive reviews we have received to date. At the same time, however, we listen to our customers so we knew we could do even better. This is why we have upgraded our speakers so that they can also connect to USB disk drives. This, in turn, allows people to enjoy even more music wherever they are."

The speakers have been designed to be ultra portable. Clearly, the company asked itself a simple question: what is the best Bluetooth speaker? They started building from there, adding certain features that really made these speakers stand out from the crowd. Hence, the sound is truly crystal clear, particularly thanks to the bass booster. It also has a sub woofer sound effect and it comes with a built in hands free speakerphone, so that people can still take calls even if they have attached their cellphone to the speakers. Additionally, it comes with an FM for those who don't have that much music on their device.

The speakers can connect both Android and iOS devices, as well as to laptops, computers and other devices. It comes in various designs and colors. Adfilic fully stands behind the quality of their product, which is why it comes with a full money back guarantee. This, and many other things, is very much appreciated by those who have purchased the cell phone speakers so far. "This little guy puts out some serious sound," says C on Amazon. "I'm really amazed at the quality and volume of the sound for such a low price. On top of that, the speaker comes with both an aux cable and a micro usb charging cable."
