Hertford, UK based New Skills Academy (NSA) is pleased to announce the creation of new job opportunities to work with the leading provider of online education in the UK. The personnel filling in the new positions will be taking on different responsibilities spread out across different departments within the company. The NSA stated that there will be several opportunities for people from different backgrounds.

This means that interested parties will have an opportunity to work in an award winning company that is known for their excellence in the field as well as their commitment to helping their students. The UK based online academy is offering a unique opportunity for growth: a chance to learn new skills while working in a prestigious company that employs a highly qualified team of professionals devoted to innovation. Their staff also enjoy access to some of the best tools available in the industry, as the company has always been a leader in the development of new technologies in the industry.

Growing at a rapid pace, New Skills Academy's expansion has been constant over the past few years, as they are always looking to hire new staff to either create new course content or to extend the support provided for the courses that are already available. These courses are also constantly updated by competent professionals to keep up with the pace of evolving trends and technology in the current market. As the company offers one of the widest range of courses available online, with a current count exceeding 500, new roles are often available in many different areas. These new openings are constantly been created out of the company's drive to develop new business opportunities.

Among the job openings that the company needs fulfilled, is a Chief Operating Officer (COO), that will be based in North America. The COO's responsibilities will include the day-to-day administration and operation of the company's newest branch in the US, as well as the overall supervisory responsibility for all of the entity's operations. In addition to this, the new Chief Operating Officer will also be tasked with lending their expertise to develop the already existing relationships with the company's partners in Canada and the US.

This is only the first of several new positions that will be based in North America to help develop the company's ongoing business opportunities. The academy invites all interested parties to join their team, who will be focused on expanding the company's reach and availability in the new region. They will also be in charge of developing new course content that is specifically targeted for the US and Canada markets.

New Skills Academy CEO Chris Morgan said, "This is a very exciting time for our business. These are our first overseas hires and we hope they will be the first of many to come. With this, we expect not only to expand our business, but also to bring the services that we're known for in the UK to a whole new market of students who may be looking for a program that is specifically tailored to their needs. We hope to resolve some of the skills shortages in the area as well as ensure that our students have the best possible advantage when seeking to improve their career prospects."

The company is set on expanding their coverage to new markets, as the online learning industry is a growing sector of the education environment that cannot be ignored. Recently, for instance, New Skills Academy announced the opening of a new course for teaching assistants, which is only a single example of the company's dedication to addressing local skill shortages. They are confident that their approach to education will benefit both their students and local industries in the years to come.
