

SMM Group Adds New Lady Small Size To Their Best Selling Oven Mitts

July 27, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

In response to popular demand for a smaller size for their extreme heat resistant oven mitts, the Nevada based company, SMM Group LLC, has launched a new size to their range. This new size, labelled as Lady Small Size on their Amazon store, is to cater to customers who reported the company's "one size fits all" to be too big for some users. One user requested, "It should be available in more sizes; my wife says they're too large."

Mike Benzon, of SMM Group, reported last year that, "In the next few months we are hoping to release a smaller hand size." Since releasing the new size the company has seen the Grill Heat Aid gloves significantly increase in demand and popularity for male and female customers alike. "I ordered the smaller lady sized gloves with red grip surfaces since I find many glove fingers too long. The temperature resistance right out of the box is excellent; no problems with baking or oven use around 400 F at all," assessed one customer. "This is coming from a guy," he added.

The new size for the Grill Heat Aid gloves are 8 inches in length from the tip of the middle finger to the point of meeting the wrist and 4.75 inches in width across the palm. The construction material is one of the primary selling points of the gloves. As Mark explains, "These gloves have been made using Aramid fibers, which are materials used in the fire fighters' uniforms. The insides of these gloves have been fitted with 100% soft cotton so that the user does not experience any discomfort while using them." With a temperature resistance of about 932 degrees Fahrenheit, these gloves outperform most of the competition on the market.

Confident of the quality they provide, SMM Group assures its customers with a life time hassle free replacement guarantee. With an active customer contact team, the company also encourages its users to reach out to them via their Amazon store or their Facebook page if they require any more information of their product range.
