SMM Group of Las Vegas, Nevada recently had their signature Grill Heat Aid gloves voted as the favorite oven mitts by their customers. The gloves have received positive ratings by their customers from all over the world, which has led them to be considered the most preferred manufacturers in the category.

The primary selling point of the gloves is their ability to handle temperatures up to 932 degrees Fahrenheit. "I like that even if I'm broiling something in the oven I can reach in and not burn my hands," explains one customer. "Silicone Mitts are great for general purposes and marinating meats but when it comes to really handling things that are over 500 degrees NOTHING beats these Grill Heat Aid Mitts," states another. This feature has also allowed customers to utilize the gloves for jobs other than for cooking purposes. "Not great just for serving food that is too hot to handle," says Mike, spokesperson for SMM Group. "Use them to tend to smokers, change light bulbs, carry logs for the fireplace and even pick up salt blocks!"

To make the Grill Heat gloves stand apart from other similar products, the company has concentrated in using cutting-edge materials in its construction. "The presence of Para Aramid and Meta Aramid ensures that the user can hold hot items for a longer period of time," Mark elaborates. "This is because these fibers provide protection against heat generated inside ovens or grills. This is one of the many reasons for the increased popularity of Grill Heat Aid gloves in the market."

The attention to quality control has apparently paid off with the gloves becoming their most popular product on Amazon. "They are very efficient, good quality and certainly more versatile than oven mitts," a customer reviewed. This has led the company to conduct a large portion of its business as exporters of the gloves, in addition to catering to the local population.

SMM Group regularly interacts with its customers to maintain their satisfaction and answer their queries. Users are encouraged to connect with them and can click here to reach their Facebook page.
