Las Vegas, NV business SMM Group LLC are proud to announce that their popular oven mitts have received EN407 certification. This means that they are classed as offering heat protection on a range of different elements, essentially leaving the user's hands completely safe while handling hot items. In response, SMM Group has included a 100% money back guarantee, as well as a lifetime replacement guarantee.

"We have always fully stood behind the quality of our products and we have made them so that they meet all the necessary standards," says Mike from SMM Group LLC. "Receiving the certification is a confirmation of all our hard work and ensures that we now have full proof of the quality of our products as well. This is also why we now offer the full guarantee."

Being EN407 certified means that the gloves have had to pass a number of different tests. They will have been checked for burn behavior after flare time and after glow time, for contact heat in terms of temperature and threshold heat, for convective heat (measuring the transfer delay), for radiant heat (measuring the transfer delay), for behavior in contact with small drops of molten metal, and for large quantities of molten metal. The Grill Heat Aid gloves have passed all of these tests. The company does want to ensure people are aware of the fact that these gloves are not 100% waterproof and they are not designed to protect from heat of hot liquids. Neither of these issues affects their certification, however.

Passing the certification test was surprisingly easy, and the company believes this is due to the materials they have used. "Our gloves have higher heat tolerance with much higher tenacity and elastic modulus since we use more of the costly Para aramid to the ratio of Meta aramid than any other brand," adds Mike. "Highest rated protection is literally at your fingertips now."

More information about the company, Grill Heat Aid or the gloves themselves can be found on the company's Facebook page. This is also an opportunity for consumers to ask any questions they may have about the oven mitts.
