

Food For Thought Reveals New Cuisinart Charcoal Water Filters

July 20, 2015

July 20, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Food for Thought has recently introduced a new line of kitchen products called Spread. The first product being launched is a set of Cuisinart charcoal water filters, which bear the model number dcc-rwf.

The coffee filtration products are designed to be Cuisinart replacement filters, and are specifically for Cuisinart coffee makers of all models. "Changing the filter often is important to ensure that impurities and calcium are removed from the water, as well as for better tasting coffee overall," states Arthur Fields, CEO of Food for Thought.

The premium charcoal filters are made from high quality materials, and designed to completely filter out any impurities that may be in the water or in the coffee maker, leftover from previous uses. They are designed to fit all models of Cuisinart coffee makers that require a water filter. "I think they're great," states Mary L., coffee maker owner. "I've had my Cuisinart for years, and have never found a filter that removes everything like this one does. My coffee tastes so much better now."

The set of six filters removes calcium, chlorine, and many other impurities that can affect the flavor of coffee.

Users have found that water comes through much clearer when using a charcoal water filter.

"I run clear water through my coffee maker all the time for hot tea," says Melvin. "I had begun to notice tiny little black things floating around in the water, but since I've been using the charcoal filters, there is absolutely nothing but water going into my cup."

The charcoal filters are only the first product in Food for Thought's Spread lineup. Other kitchen products are planned for release very soon. The company offers a satisfaction guarantee for the filters, which are durable and easy to use. Cuisinart owners simply have to place the filter into the appropriate place for filtration to work. Melvin has been more than satisfied, saying, "They're so easy to use, and I really can't believe how clear they make my water. I've noticed a significant improvement in the flavor of my coffee as well."
