Dynamic Heating and Cooling announces a new blog post about how to clean one's air conditioning unit that includes helpful information and answers to commonly asked questions. They are a heating and cooling contractor that likes their customers to be proactive when it comes to taking care of their home HVAC units. This informative article can be seen here on their website at <https://www.dynamiccooling.com/how-to-clean-your-air-conditioning/>. The article covers what a person needs to do to get their outside air conditioning unit and their HVAC ductwork ready for use before the hot summer hits.

Company spokesperson Josh Bersee had to this to say about why someone needs to get on this air conditioning task before the summer heavy use season hits. He says, "We always advise people to clean their HVAC ducts and around their outside air conditioning units periodically. This is especially important in early spring after an air conditioning system has sat unused for a long period of time. This cleaning will go a long way toward helping the AC unit pull in the vital air it requires in an unrestricted manner. A good cleaning also helps extend the life of the air conditioning unit too."

Bersee goes on to add that it's never a bad idea for a person to call a local HVAC professional to come to do spring service on their air conditioning unit. Not only will they clean around the unit, but they will also inspect it and do any required service it needs too. Often times during a spring service call, an HVAC tech will also be able to correct small AC unit problems before they become bigger and more expensive ones.

Reviewed by Kyle S. in Stafford, VA 5.0 out of 5.0 stars 05-22-2019: "After numerous previous attempts to fix our HVAC with other companies through a home warranty service, we ditched them and went with Dynamic Heating and Cooling through Home Advisor. Josh took his time to investigate all avenues to figure out what was wrong. Very professional and courteous, he wasn't just there to get a check and leave. Ultimately he cleaned and added a sealant to our system, recharged the coolant, and fixed some wiring issues from the previous repair attempts. Overall great experience."
