July 05, 2019

July 05, 2019 -

Augusoft, Inc, in Minneapolis, Minnesota, was recently listed as a top vendor in the field of student enrollment management software. The industry report lists the statistics for Global Student Enrollment Management Software Market Size, Status and the forecast for 2019 through 2025. Augusoft is proud to announce that they have been included in the report's top companies in this software segment.

The report states that the market for this software has the ability to "raise as the most significant market worldwide." The market report studied the current market size, as well as competitive surroundings, and provides a list of companies that are leading the way in this relatively new industry.

The report was developed to give companies in the global student enrollment management software industry information about the market and major players within the industry. The study aids with understanding where companies should focus their marketing attention for growth and profitability and presents the competitive landscape that companies will be facing.

Augusoft is listed as one of the key higher education software vendors in the world, along with other companies, that are helping facilities to better streamline their processes. Market segment type for the industry is separated into cloud-based companies and on-premises vendors, and market segment by application is split into schools and training institutions.

Currently, the market spans the United States, as well as Europe, China, India, Southeast Asia, Japan, and Central and South America. The report begins with an introduction of the software market and studies the different segments based on their geographical locations and other factors.

Online admissions software programs help institutions to better automate and organize information which in turn helps those admissions offices to run more smoothly. Studies show that this software allows faculty in these offices to spend more one on one time with students, and conclusive studies have shown that quality time spent with students is one of the most effective ways of eliminating drop out rates among students.

Experts predict that the software market for student admissions programs is expected to increase significantly between 2019 and 2026. Augusoft states that they are pleased to be included in the study and to have made the list of top providers in the world for this type of software. The company states that their goal is and has always been to better the lives of students by helping non-credit programs to better collect and analyze their data.

?We are honored to be included in this significant report which highlights what we have forecasted for the marketplace. Continuing education and workforce development remain a significant driver for the economy,? said Cem Erdem, CEO/President, Augusoft, Inc.

Augusoft has a referral program that rewards its clients for referring the company to other institutions.

The company states that this process can be seriously streamlined, making the admissions process easier and faster for the facility as well as for the student. The same facilities also responded that they find it difficult to gather certain data online during their admissions registration process.
