July 27, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

The new family owned business, San Diego Window Tinting Company, has recently opened their doors for business, specifically catering to their local customers. The company provides their customized tinting services tailored to individual needs by appointment only, which can be booked through their website at <http://www.sandiegotint.net/>.

The new company has promised to offer a competitive price to quality ratio on window tinting in San Diego. The company spokesperson, John, said, "We only use high quality tint and will advise you on which tint to get." He further explained the purpose of their service, "Tinted windows will help keep the temperatures in your car comfortable, and will provide you with an extra layer of privacy."

The process involves application of a thin layer of tinted film to the vehicle and carefully contoured to the shape of the window. This reduces the amount of UV light from entering the car. "Since UV rays are responsible for fading fabrics," elaborated John, "a low emissivity coating will also keep your car seats looking as good as new." The reduction of sun light keeps the car relatively cool depending upon the amount of tint that is applied to the windows. The company offers a range of tints to its customers to cater to different preferences, "Tint film can range from 5% to 70%, usually the lower the percentage the darker the window tint is."

John has also cautioned against attempting to tint windows at home, "Many vehicle owners find it almost impossible to apply the coating so that it is completely wrinkle and air bubble free." If done incorrectly, the risk of the film peeling off the window also increases. "If you can afford it, it is far better to use a professional service," John advised.

Although the company is new in providing window tinting in San Diego, it has received admiration for the work they carried out. "Great job, affordable, friendly and clean," reviewed one customer. "I wish more businesses were like this one, great job." This has led the company to be more interactive in connecting with their customers on their social media channels.
