Brecksville, Ohio based Hylan Dental Care recently published a new blog entry sharing tips and advice on choosing the right toothbrush and toothpaste.

The dental care specialists explain that most people do not give the matter much thought when they buy a toothbrush or toothpaste. They say, "For many people when it comes to choosing a brand of toothpaste, there are only two options. It's either the cheapest one or the most popular brands. Most people don't realize that the root of their oral issues and discomfort may lay within this apparently insignificant choice. It's the same when choosing a toothbrush; they'll either pick the cheapest or one that looks pretty. When it comes to any task, you need to have the right tools for the job. That is why we have decided to explain, to our beloved community, the importance of choosing the right oral care tools."

The first aspect to look out for when choosing a toothbrush is the bristles' softness. It is recommended that shoppers choose a brush with soft and round bristles, as this will allow a gentle touch when brushing their teeth. Using stiff bristles, and brushing one's teeth too harshly is a leading cause of sensitive teeth, the specialists explain.

In addition to this, the shape of the toothbrush's head should comfortably fit in the mouth. Those browsing for toothbrushes should pick a shape that is likely to fit their mouths as the bristles need to be able to reach the rear molars. The clinic notes that there are options available for people who do not, or cannot, brush as thoroughly as they should?an electric toothbrush will often be able to do most of the work for them. This is especially helpful for those who suffer from a condition or injury that makes it difficult for them to brush their teeth properly.

When it comes to choosing a brand of toothpaste, Hylan Dental Care explains that the most crucial part to consider is the product's composition. One should pick a toothpaste that contains fluoride, as the vast majority of dentists agree that fluoride is essential for oral hygiene and health. This recommendation is based on fluoride's proven safety and cavity-fighting properties.

Dr. Brad Hylan of Hylan Dental Care explains that choosing a toothpaste is a rather straightforward process, clarifying that, "It's just about choosing the one that fits better to one's needs. Some toothpaste will be good for adults, but not children. Others will be best for whitening purposes, while others are designed for sensitive teeth. A good practice is to always look at the toothpaste's list of ingredients. The longer it is, the better chance you have at being sensitive to something in the toothpaste.

The local Brecksville dentist further explains that any toothpaste that fits inside of that category can be good, although there are some specific quality labels to look out for. Most toothpaste brands will carry the ADA seal of approval, which means that they meet every requirement of the American Dental Association. While the participation in the ADA program is voluntary, and many well-known brands don't participate, this seal ensures the quality of the toothpaste that it is on.

Ultimately, when choosing a specific kind of toothpaste, the clinic states that it is best to ask one's trusted dentist for their professional recommendation. This is especially helpful when experiencing issues with one's teeth or oral hygiene as a whole, as a specialist can refer to a specific product for them to look out for based on their symptoms.

Dr. Hylan advises that, when choosing the right toothbrush and toothpaste, one should avoid being cheap. "Dental hygiene and health are critical, and you should be sure you have the right tools for the job. While it's tempting to choose a pack of toothbrushes for $2, and the cheapest toothpaste available, patients often end up regretting this decision. Spending a little bit more on a toothbrush of high quality, along with the best toothpaste, can save you a lot of money in future medical bills."
