July 09, 2019 -
Utah Disaster Specialists recently announced the addition of Water Damage Cleanup to their broad selection of services in Park City, Utah. While the company has multiple years of experience in the field, they only recently extended their services to cover the Park City area.

Daryl Olsen, a spokesperson for Utah Disaster Specialists, says, "We expect to prove the value of our services in Park City, and earn a reputation as we have in the other areas we already service. We're qualified specialists, and we understand how important it is to attend to these dire situations as soon as possible. Due to this, we will do everything within our power to answer our customer's emergencies in a timely manner. From now on, the Park City community can rely on us whenever they need any water damage cleanup."

The company explains that in situations where water is leaking into a place where it should not be, responding quickly is of the utmost priority. Leaving a leaking pipe or other water sources unattended can cause serious damage to a house's integrity, as water can soak through hardwood and even non-porous stonework very quickly. This means that fixing the leak is a race against time, and should not be taken lightly no matter how insignificant the leak initially appears to be. Furthermore, even the mildest water leak caused by a fractured pipe can cause enough humidity to create an environment that is prone to mold growth.

In any case, it is best to act as soon as the leak is detected, and Utah Disaster Specialists takes pride in offering services under the premise of addressing their client's water damage concerns in a timely manner. Olsen asserts, "As soon as a client calls in with an emergency, we'll assemble and dispatch a team to assess the situation and develop a plan to move forward. We only rely on the best specialists, who have each dealt with every possible problem in the field. This ensures that our customers? emergencies are promptly resolved."

The company notes that there are a few proactive measures that homeowners can take as they wait for the company?s specialists to arrive. While it may seem obvious, for instance, homeowners sometimes neglect to move electrical appliances away from the source of the water leak. Though this is understandable given the stress of the situation, the company advises that appliances be moved as soon as possible to avoid the risk of damage. However, homeowners are further advised to simply wait for the company?s team to arrive instead of attempting any excessively heavy work as this could potentially worsen the situation.

The company has earned a highly positive reputation for excellence online. Through the Google review platform, customer Daniel Martin says, "I had an extraordinary experience. My problem was water damage in a remote location to a solid-hickory floor, with damage that extended to two levels. The help was quick and thorough, and included several follow-up visits. I was especially impressed with the number of pieces of equipment that were put to use and for the expert advice and help. Not only did they help me with my water problem, they also volunteered to help me understand what would happen with the insurance company, and they came to my home twice solely for that purpose. Understanding insurance was the biggest help of the whole project. I can't really say enough nice things about this company."
