Evan Roberts, owner of real estate investment firm Dependable Homebuyers, has taken an initiative to educate sellers, buyers and agents about the real estate market in Newport News. Roberts has spent decades learning about the various factors that influence the market. He has studied trends over the years, derived lessons from upswings and downswings, worked with sellers and buyers to develop an unmatched understanding of how the market actually works. One of his principal inferences is that the entire real estate market in Newport News does not have any one omnipresent trend. There are many local factors at play. Those who tend to take an overall view of the situation might not be aware of the nuances at the micro level. True assessment of the environment can only stem from delving deep into the local factors.

As part of the information campaign launched by the We Buy Houses company, Roberts and his team are producing videos and penning articles to shed light on everything associated with the real estate industry in Newport News. Roberts is breaking down his vlogs into categories as dictated by zip codes or locations, ask prices, types of properties and other factors. According to Roberts, sellers and buyers must understand how the market is faring for the type of property they own or are looking for. All sellers and buyers must realize the scenario in one neighborhood might be completely different from the prevailing sentiments for other locations. The same is true for different designs and architectures, sizes and conditions of houses for sale in the city. Interested homeowners can read a recent press release they published at https://drive.google.com/a/dependablehomebuyers.com/file/d/1kjshQ0b0nUZKMOvTtPwrwKZrOPiDUzYH/preview.

Roberts has already produced a few videos and published several blog posts. Dependable Homebuyers will continue to produce more such informative content to be of assistance to buyers and sellers. This is one more attempt of Roberts to help people navigate the real estate market. His company already buys houses from sellers. They have been acquiring residential properties of all kinds in Newport News and the surrounding areas for more than five years now. The company has a growing nationwide presence now. It continues to buy houses directly from owners or sellers. It does not deal with intermediaries. The company has a track record of expediting such sales. It has the ability to present a cash purchase offer to sellers within a day or two of the viewing and inspection. Roberts and his team can close the deal immediately if sellers accept the proposition. The sale can be completed in one week.

Ever since its inception, Dependable Homebuyers has endeavored to simplify the selling process for homeowners. It is committed to the same despite the market being largely in favor of buyers. The growing inventory in Newport News is leading to a concerning degree of saturation. Roberts is still upbeat about the residential real estate sector and is trying to help people with factual and contextual information relevant for Newport News. The official website of the company has also made a few resources and tools available to simplify the quests of sellers and buyers.
