July 16, 2019 -

There are various types of houses on sale in Baton Rouge. These are spread across neighborhoods spanning the length and breadth of the city as well as the surrounding areas. There are different types of houses for sale. The variations in design, the different ask prices, the vast range of the age of properties and other similar or dissimilar factors make for a complicated environment that many people are unaware of or not fully familiar with. Many buyers and sellers begin their quest without truly understanding the real estate market in Baton Rouge. Evan Roberts of Dependable Homebuyers is trying to change that.

Evan Roberts is the founder and owner of the We Buy Houses company. It is a real estate investment firm that now has a nationwide presence. Roberts and his team have been buying houses in Baton Rouge for almost six years, ever since the inception of Dependable Homebuyers. Roberts has invaluable experience and firsthand understanding of how the local real estate market works. He is now sharing his experience through video blogs and articles. Here's a recent press release they published.

The contents being produced and published by Dependable Homebuyers is highlighting the relevant facts pertaining to different types of houses being pegged at certain prices, the influence of location, design and architecture, installed features and other amenities. The current condition of a house is also a major factor. Roberts is covering one zip code at a time for the purpose of specificity as the environment is not identical for the entire city. There are many micro factors at play. Having a general understanding of the macro environment will not help sellers or buyers. Agents too can misread situations if they only rely on the macro environment.

Evan Roberts says that neighborhoods, types of homes, specific age of a property, the present condition and prevailing sentiments in the market must be collectively considered and then a seller or buyer should determine the preferable terms of a deal they want to freeze. The videos highlight demand for different properties in specific neighborhoods, the variation from one area to another, the price range of certain types of houses in chosen locations and the varying conditions of those properties. These details help buyers to know what they can expect. The information enables sellers to understand what is happening in the market so they can respond appropriately. Houses are not bought or sold in an isolated environment. The larger trends at the macro level and the local factors or micro environment play an influential role. Both should be understood for a buyer or seller to succeed in their mission.
