July 31, 2019 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

iProven, a company specialized in developing medical devices for home use, just announced the release of their Ear- and Forehead Thermometer DMT-511. This thermometer is a new model on the market and is provided with state of the art technology and design.

Calibrated for both ear and forehead measurements, parents can trust to get reliable readings when using either measuring mode of the DMT-511.

"That's not all," Suzanne, the company's spokesperson adds. "We realized parents to newborns have to measure temperatures all the time. Not only their baby's body temperature but also the temperature of baby's room, bottle, and bath. That's why our DMT-511 is equipped with a third mode: the object mode. This makes our DMT-511 an all-in-one device for young parents."

For parents, it is always hard to see their little ones struggle with fever or illness. That's why a lot of parents are afraid to cause even more discomfort when taking their baby's temperature. "This device may mean the end to that struggle," Suzanne adds. "It gives readings in 1-3 seconds, so babies one won't even notice what's going on. It's also provided with a mute mode and backlight, so you can measure easily in the dark, while your baby is fast asleep."

The company known as iProven has been developing helpful products for the home, particularly with regards to health. Their products have been chosen, developed and enhanced to meet their clinical standards of quality, consistency and durability, without compromising simplicity for the home user. Those who would like to know more about the DMT-511 Ear & Forehead Thermometer can visit their website or their Amazon page, or contact them by phone or by email.
